GOV. WHITMAN SIGNS BILLS FOR BRIDGE AND TERMINAL

Sleightsburgh Bridge Bill Makes $139,000 Available To Complete The Structure---Canal Terminal Bill Appropriates $160,000 For Sites And Engineering Expenses.

Governor Whitman has signed the two bills introduced in the legislature by Senator Walton by which the Sleightsburgh bridge will be completed and a barge canal terminal established here.

Announcement of the signing of the bills was made at Albany at 11 o'clock this morning.

The barge canal terminal bill, which applies to Kingston, Newburgh, Poughkeepsie and Yonkers, becomes Chapter 555 of the Laws of 1918.

The Sleightsburgh bridge bill becomes Chapter 563 of the Laws of 1918.

Can Complete Bridge Now.

The importance of the Sleightsburgh bridge bill was urged on the legislature and state officials generally by Senator Walton from the time it was introduced and he was indefatigable in his efforts to secure its passage. Governor Whitman promised that he would sign the bill and his action shows that he has fully understood the conditions surrounding the matter and a full appreciation of the conditions which the bill is intended to meet.

The signing of the bill by Governor Whitman means that there will be money available for completing the bridge across the Rondout creek. The bill appropriates the sum of $139,000, or so much thereof as may be needed, for completing the bridge, the work to be done in the manner prescribed by and subject to the provisions of the highway law.

Readers of The Freeman will recall the long fight which has been made to complete the bridge. An amendment was passed to the highway law providing that the bridge should be made a part of the state highway system, and it was further specifically provided that it should be constructed out of that portion of the second fifty million dollar bond issue moneys which were alloted to Ulster county for the improvement of state routes within the county. It is the only case of the kind in the state.

Ulster county's share of these moneys, as pointed out in a letter from State Highway Commissioner Edwin Duffey to Senator Sage, chairman of the senate finance committee, was $456,570.20. But "Because of the fact that the bridge was to be paid for out of the county's share the county had but one-third of this amount available for the construction of the highways proper in the county, the other two-thirds being taken wholly for the bridge."

When bids were secured it was found that the cost of steel and labor had increased on account of the war to such an extent that the lowest bid was far in excess of the amount available and after some discussion and many conferences the State Highway Department decided to change the plans and award the contract only for the abutments. This was done and the abutments are completed.

The additional amount now available will be sufficient to complete the bridge.

It is sincerely to be hoped that there will be no further useless delay in proceeding with work at once. Further delay in completing this important link in the highway system on the west side of the river will not be excused by the people of this vicinity or the state at large.

On the subject of importance of the bridge, Commissioner Duffey informed Senator Sage:

"The bridge is of state wide importance. One of the most important through routes in the state is the one from New York to Albany on the west side of the Hudson. With the exception of this bridge, every other gap in this route is provided for. Our department has co-operated with the highway commission of the state of New Jersey in order that our joint plans might result in the completion of the entire route from a point opposite the city of New York. You will doubtless recall that the route itself leads directly to and across the Palisades Park at Bear Mountain in the highlands of the Hudson, and thence across the United States military reservation at West Point, and includes also the extensive work now well under way in and around Storm King Mountain."

The Canal Terminal Bill.

The Canal Terminal Bill was also introduced by Senator Walton in the senate and by Assemblyman Brush in the assembly, and provides for the construction of barge canal terminals at Kingston, Newburgh, Poughkeepsie and Yonkers, and appropriates $160,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the act.

Of the amount thus appropriated, $150,000 shall be expended in the acquisition of sites, and $10,000 shall be expended in making the necessary surveys and in the preparation of plans and specifications.

The canal terminals are part of the plan for the development of the transportation facilities of the state. The state barge canal will permit the big boats from the Great Lakes to bring their produce to the Hudson river and exchange it for products of the east which are to be taken to the west and the northwest. The canal terminals will provide the exchange stations.

Chambers of Commerce along the Hudson river, particularly in the four cities provided for in the bill, have been extremely anxious to have this work taken up as quickly as possible, and Governor Whitman's action in signing the bill will allow the work to proceed without delay.

The signing of both bills by Governor Whitman certainly gives cause for rejoicing. The rejoicing will be still greater when work is begun on the bridge and terminal, and any attempt to delay completion of either will be promptly rebuked.

OUGHELTREE WILL RETIRE FROM P. O.

Efficient Assistant Postmaster Resigns After 24 Years Work in Postal Service—Has Served Under Six Postmasters.

Assistant Postmaster Edgar E. Ougheltree, one of the most efficient men in the post office department in the country, has filed his resignation of the office with the post office authorities at Washington and with Postmaster William C. DeWitt. Mr. Ougheltree's resignation makes a distinct loss in the personnel of the local post office department.

Mr. Ougheltree has served as assistant postmaster for 24 years under the administration of six postmasters in Kingston, and has always worked for the betterment of the city's postal service. It has been due largely to his work that the department has been classed as one of the most efficient of any city of its size in the country.

Just what Mr. Ougheltree's plans for the future are is not known at present. He carries with him the best wishes of the entire post office department.

Postmaster DeWitt stated to The Freeman today that he had urged Mr. Ougheltree to reconsider his resignation as he felt that the loss of Mr. Ougheltree's services would mean a loss to every resident of the city. Postmaster DeWitt said he could not speak highly enough of the services of Mr. Ougheltree, who has proved a most capable man, in whom he reposed the highest confidence, whom he had found one of the most efficent accountants he had ever met, and a man who thoroughly understood the needs of the post office department in Kingston.

New York, May 9.—After tunnelling all night through soft earth a rescue party early today rescued eight of the eleven laborers who were entombed in the cave-in on the new Flatbush extension of the Brooklyn Subway. Three workmen are still buried and it is believed they are dead.

The accident was due to overzealousness of one of the workmen shoveling too deeply below one of the sills, according to Public Service Commissioner Charles H. Whitney.

Light Frost During Night.

The weather man's prediction that there would be a light frost during Wednesday night proved true. The frost was not heavy enough to do any damage, which was fortunate for the amateur gardener.

JOHNSON CAN HAVE SIX CENTS DAMAGES

In the case of Jacob Johnson, respondent, against the New York Telephone Company, appellant, the appellate division of the supreme court handed down the following decision Wednesday:

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE BATTLE NEWS

Driven from the ground they had occupied on the Flanders front yesterday and again pushed back on the Picardy battle line, the Germans today renewed their efforts in the hill country southwest of Ypres in an effort to break the Anglo-French grip upon the chain of heights in that zone.

The British and French, holding the line of LaClytte and Voormezeele (from two to five miles of Ypres) came back last night with a blow against the Germans that sent them reeling from the few points where Teutons had succeeded in gaining a footing in some advanced Allied positions.

The attack was made in such force and followed so quickly upon the heels of the German assaults that the Teutons had apparently been unable to consolidate the ground.

Opposite Amiens, on the Picardy front, the British advanced and improved their positions between the Somme and Ancre rivers, where they have had a series of successes in the past fortnight. There were no infantry operations on a big scale along that front, however, the big guns playing the chief role in the fighting activity.

The indications are that the Germans intend to concentrate their heaviest pressure along the Ypres salient in an attempt to compel the British to evacuate the town. The German blows yesterday and today were delivered in a northerly direction in the same region where the Teutons were so badly whipped in the all-day struggle on April 29.

General Foch has evidently concentrated a large force of both British and French troops in that sector and the Allied lines are holding with stone wall firmness.

The infantry dashes were preceded by a violent cannonade. The drumfire was so terrific that it was possibly heard in Dover, England, for London reported today that cannonading, coming from the seaside, could be observed along the southeastern coast of England.

It was uncertain whether it came from the Flanders front or whether British warships were again attacking the German submarine base at Ostend.

The German attacks are costing them heavily and it is reported that Von Hindenburg and his chief aide, General Ludendorff, have quarreled as a result of the failure of the drive.

This was the fiftieth day of the German offensive.

MARLBOROUGH WENT WAY OVER THE TOP

Gratifying Result of the Third Liberty Loan in Town of Marlborough, Which Oversubscribed $14,000.

Fifty-six thousand dollars was allotted as the quota of the town of Marlborough but more than seventy thousand was subscribed for. On the day that the Liberty Coach passed through the town about $10,000 was subscribed at Milton and $27,000 subscribed at Marlborough village. A large percentage of the people subscribed; the majority of the subscriptions were for $50 and $100. Many of the poorest citizens took a bond. The ladies' committee at Milton was especially active and their work was attended with much success. Some of them visited every house in the northern end of the town to solicit subscriptions. They even went into the fields and solicited from the farm laborers, and very few appeals were without success. Milton women claim that through their efforts more than $20,000 was obtained—the youngest subscriber being Ruth Alice Dowd. In fact, great earnestness was manifested by all in the town. On the day the coach passed through the Marlborough band was present both at Milton and Marlborough, and Company H, New York Guard, was out in full attendance. Their appearance and maneuver were much complimented. Marlborough has reason to be proud of the patriotism manifested and it took one of the leading places among the towns of the county.

Chairman, Milton.

They caused a loss estimated by the authorities at upwards of $500,000.

BRAYTON'S TRICK PROVED EXPENSIVE

Caught Standing on Post Office Corner With Hand Mirror With Which He Was Reflecting Sun's Rays in Eyes of Girls at Work in Cigar Factory.

Frank Brayton, 19 years old, is in trouble again, and this time it cost him $10 when arraigned Wednesday afternoon before Judge Schirick in police court by Officer Shader who had made the arrest.

Wednesday afternoon Brayton was standing on the central post office corner with a small hand mirror in his hand with which he was enjoying himself reflecting the rays of the sun into the eyes of the girls at work on the second floor of the American cigar factory. Several complaints have been made to the police of this practice on the part of would-be jokers.

While Brayton was busily engaged he did not notice the sudden appearance on the scene of Officer Shader, who promptly placed the boy under arrest and escorted him to the city hall. It was a sudden shock to young Brayton's nerves.

Brayton received a still further shock when with a smile on his face he heard Officer Shader inform the court on what charge he had made the arrest, but the smile quickly vanished when Judge Schirick found him guilty and imposed a fine of $10.

The example made of Brayton will probably cause other would-be jokers to reflect seriously before attempting the same kind of a trick.

This is not the first time Brayton has been arraigned this year in police court. The last time he was arrested for speeding a motorcycle on Albany avenue at which time he paid a fine of $5. At that time he confessed to driving the machine at a speed of 60 miles an hour.

OUGHELTREE WILL RETIRE FROM P. O.

Efficient Assistant Postmaster Resigns After 24 Years Work in Postal Service—Has Served Under Six Postmasters.

Assistant Postmaster Edgar E. Ougheltree, one of the most efficient men in the post office department in the country, has filed his resignation of the office with the post office authorities at Washington and with Postmaster William C. DeWitt. Mr. Ougheltree's resignation makes a distinct loss in the personnel of the local post office department.

Mr. Oughetree has served as assistant postmaster for 24 years under the administration of six postmasters in Kingston, and has always worked for the betterment of the city's postal service. It has been due largely to his work that the department has been classed as one of the most efficient of any city of its size in the country.

Just what Mr. Oughetree's plans for the future are is not known at present. He carries with him the best wishes of the entire post office department.

Postmaster DeWitt stated to The Freeman today that he had urged Mr. Oughetree to reconsider his resignation as he felt that the loss of Mr. Oughetree's services would mean a loss to the department in Kingston. Postmaster DeWitt said he could not speak highly enough of the services of Mr. Oughetree, who has proved a most capable man, in whom he reposed the highest confidence, whom he had found one of the most efficent accountants he had ever met, and a man who thoroughly understood the needs of the post office department in Kingston.

TUNNELLING PARTY RECUES EIGHT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 9.—After tunnelling all night through soft earth a rescue party early today rescued eight of the eleven laborers who were entombed in the cave-in on the new Flatbush extension of the Brooklyn Subway. Three workmen are still buried and it is believed they are dead.

The accident was due to overzealousness of one of the workmen shoveling too deeply below one of the sills, according to Public Service Commissioner Charles H. Whitney.

Light Frost During Night.

The weather man's prediction that there would be a light frost during Wednesday night proved true. The frost was not heavy enough to do any damage, which was fortunate for the amateur gardener.

IN THE SERVICE OF OUR COUNTRY

JOHNSON CAN HAVE SIX CENTS DAMAGES

In the case of Jacob Johnson, respondent, against the New York Telephone Company, appellant, the appellate division of the supreme court handed down the following decision Wednesday:

"Judgment reversed upon the ground that the damages are excessive and new trial granted with costs to the appellant to abide event, unless the plaintiff stipulates to reduce the damages to six cents, in which case the judgment is modified accordingly and as modified affirmed without costs. All concur."

Mr. Johnson, of No. 415 Washington avenue, brought an action against the defendant for trespass for use and occupation of his premises without permission of the plaintiff and maintaining a pole and guy wire upon and over such premises. He demanded $47.25 damages. City Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., rendered judgment against the Telephone Company for $25 and costs. The Telephone Company appealed to the county court from this judgment, which Judge Jenkins affirmed with costs. Milton O. Auchmoody was attorney for Mr. Johnson; D. G. Attridge represented the Telephone Co.

MAY CALL 180 MEN FROM ULSTER SOON

Approximately 123 Men From Boards 1 and 2 Will Entrain the Last of This Month---Definite Entrainment Instructions Not Received Yet.

The local boards of Divisions No. 1 and 2 of Ulster county will have to furnish approximately a total of 123 men for the next movement of conscripts who will entrain during the five days' period beginning May 25.

Division No. 1 will furnish approximately 65 men and Division No. 2 will furnish approximately 58 men.

These figures are contained in a bulletin received today by the boards from the adjutant general's office.

The bulletin states that schedules showing definite date of entrainment and destination are not available at present, so no definite information can be given yet.

The bulletin states that the provost marshal general has ordered a general entrainment for Camps Upton, Dix, Wadsworth, Sevier and Hancock.

If the same proportion prevails for Division No. 3, it will mean that Ulster County will shortly send approximately, 180 men to National Army Cantonments.

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE BATTLE NEWS

Driven from the ground they had occupied on the Flanders front yesterday and again pushed back on the Picardy battle line, the Germans today renewed their efforts in the hill country southwest of Ypres in an effort to break the Anglo-French grip upon the chain of heights in that zone.

The British and French, holding the line of LaClytte and Voormezeele (from two to five miles of Ypres) came back last night with a blow against the Germans that sent them reeling from the few points where Teutons had succeeded in gaining a footing in some advanced Allied positions.

The attack was made in such force and followed so quickly upon the heels of the German assaults that the Teutons had apparently been unable to consolidate the ground.

Opposite Amiens, on the Picardy front, the British advanced and improved their positions between the Somme and Ancre rivers, where they have had a series of successes in the past fortnight. There were no infantry operations on a big scale along that front, however, the big guns playing the chief role in the fighting activity.

The indications are that the Germans intend to concentrate their heaviest pressure along the Ypres salient in an attempt to compel the British to evacuate the town. The German blows yesterday and today were delivered in a northerly direction in the same region where the Teutons were so badly whipped in the all-day struggle on April 29.

General Foch has evidently concentrated a large force of both British and French troops in that sector and the Allied lines are holding with stone wall firmness.

The infantry dashes were preceded by a violent cannonade. The bulletin for London reported today that cannonading, coming from the seaside, could be observed along the southeastern coast of England.

It was uncertain whether it came from the Flanders front or whether British warships were again attacking the German submarine base at Ostend.

The German attacks are costing them heavily and it is reported that Von Hindenburg and his chief aide, General Ludendorff, have quarreled as a result of the failure of the drive.

This was the fiftieth day of the German offensive.

MARLBOROUGH WENT WAY OVER THE TOP

Gratifying Result of the Third Liberty Loan in Town of Marlborough, Which Oversubscribed $14,000.

Fifty-six thousand dollars was allotted as the quota of the town of Marlborough but more than seventy thousand was subscribed for. On the day that the Liberty Coach passed through the town about $10,000 was subscribed at Milton and $27,000 subscribed at Marlborough village. A large percentage of the people subscribed; the majority of the subscriptions were for $50 and $100. Many of the poorest citizens took a bond. The ladies' committee at Milton was especially active and their work was attended with much success. Some of them visited every house in the northern end of the town to solicit subscriptions. They even went into the fields and solicited from the farm laborers, and very few appeals were without success. Milton women claim that through their efforts more than $20,000 was obtained—the youngest subscriber being Ruth Alice Dowd. In fact, great earnestness was manifested by all in the town. On the day the coach passed through the Marlborough band was present both at Milton and Marlborough, and Company H, New York Guard, was out in full attendance. Their appearance and maneuver were much complimented. Marlborough has reason to be proud of the patriotism manifested and it took one of the leading places among the towns of the county.

C. M. WOOLSEY.
Chairman, Milton.

$500,000 FIRE IN MAINE.

Greater Part of One Town Destroyed —Now Under Control.

They caused a loss estimated by the authorities at upwards of $500,000.

BRAYTON'S TRICK PROVED EXPENSIVE

Frank Brayton, 19 years old, is in trouble again, and this time it cost him $10 when arraigned Wednesday afternoon before Judge Schirick, in police court by Officer Shader who had made the arrest.

Wednesday afternoon Brayton was standing on the central post office corner with a small hand mirror in his hand with which he was enjoying himself reflecting the rays of the sun into the eyes of the girls at work on the second floor of the American cigar factory. Several complaints have been made to the police of this practice on the part of would-be jokers.

While Brayton was busily engaged he did not notice the sudden appearance on the scene of Officer Shader, who promptly placed the boy under arrest and escorted him to the city hall. It was a sudden shock to young Brayton's nerves.

Brayton received a still further shock when with a smile on his face he heard Officer Shader inform the court on what charge he had made the arrest, but the smile quickly vanished when Judge Schirick found him guilty and imposed a fine of $10.

The example made of Brayton will probably cause other would-be jokers to reflect seriously before attempting the same kind of a trick.

This is not the first time Brayton has been arraigned this year in police court. The last time he was arrested for speeding a motorcycle on Albany avenue at which time he paid a fine of $5. At that time he confessed to driving the machine at a speed of 60 miles an hour.

VICTORY MENUS.

These menus, planned to conserve time, labor and money, to save the foods that are scarce and use those of which there is an abundance, are Victory Menus in more senses than one. Friday.

Breakfast—Orange slices, rolled oats with top milk and *maple sugar, *hominy grits spoon bread, *coffee.

Lunch or Supper—Salsify au gratin, quartered browned potatoes, *gingerbread with whipped cream.

Dinner—Broiled mackerel steaks, creamed potatoes, home canned string beans, *fruit jelly with nuts.

*May be omitted and still leave a balanced meal.

Milk for children to drink at each meal.

Hot breads made from wheat substitutes are much more easily and entirely digested if the cereal is scalded or partly cooked before it is used in the bread. Spoon bread, an old southern dish, is an example of this kind of bread, and it is delicious. As the name implies, it must be served with a spoon from the dish in which it is baked. With more and more families adding their names to the wheatless "honor roll," these tempting hot breads come into greater favor.

Hominy Grits Spoon Bread.

2 cups water, 1 cup milk, 1 cup hominy grits, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 eggs.

Add the hominy grits to the boiling water and bring slowly to the boiling point. Cook for 5 minutes. Add the eggs well beaten, milk, butter and the salt. Beat thoroughly and bake in a well greased pan about 30 minutes in a hot oven. Serve from the same dish with a spoon.

Gingerbread (100 Per Cent Wheat Substitute).

½ cup fat, 1½ cups molasses, 1 cup boiling water, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 cup corn flour, 1 cup buckwheat flour, 2 eggs.

Cream the fat and add the molasses and the boiling water. Add the sifted dry ingredients to the first mixture. Add the eggs last. Bake the cake in a loaf or in a shallow pan in a moderate oven.

Recipes for any of the dishes in these menus which cannot be found in cook books may be had by writing to the Department of Home Economics, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

Why my filmiest curtains never tear in the laundry

I USED to hang my dainty new curtains with a sigh, dreading from the beginning the ominous day when they would have to be spoiled in the laundry.

Now I never give them a thought—I have found how easy it is to keep them always fresh and new.

I wash them the modern way in pure Lux suds, and with no rubbing. The dainty Lux flakes dissolve instantly in hot water and whip up into rich, pure suds. I souse the sheer lacey curtains in the foamy lather—gently squeeze the cleansing Lux suds through them again and again, then take them out so clean and fresh, with not a thread broken.

With Lux there is none of that old-time rubbing to break and tear the sheer material—there are no particles of undissolved soap to cling to the delicate threads through all the rinsings, and coarsen and yellow them.

Try Lux for your laciest curtains—for your fragile laces and finest table linen. See for yourself how simple it is to keep them white and pure. Your grocer, druggist or department store has Lux. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How to wash fine curtains

Shake the dust carefully out of the curtains, then let them soak in clear, cold water for an hour to loosen the dirt.

Use a tablespoonful of Lux to a gallon of water. Dissolve in boiling or very hot water, and whisk into a thick lather. Put the curtains in and souse thoroughly. Squeeze the suds through the fabric. Do not rub. Rinse three times in clear, hot water, and dry in the sun.

Silk and Colored Curtains should not be soaked. Wet in cold water, then wash quickly in lukewarm suds, rinse three times in clear, luke-warm water, and dry in the shade.

Use Lux for anything that pure water alone won't injure

OUR SAILORS IN NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN

What Our Own Boys Are Doing Preparing to "Unt The Unter-sea 'Uns."

Dear Folks:

Not having had much more contact with navigation than an occasional ducking in Kingston creek or an after-school swim off the Island Dock, we didn't expect much of ourselves in this new job of ours of "prepping" for the big game of 'unting the unter-sea 'uns, but as things are turning out quite rosy for all of us by way of promotions, we just have to open up and shoot home our jubilation.

Perhaps there's a little cockiness in that deck swagger of ours as we promenade along the streets back home on leave, but you can just stuff it down with your Mullen's, folks, there's a reason for our ebullition. Witness the following exploits extraordinary of a few of us Naval Reserves (the other boys, militia and regulars, will have to get busy with their press agent, because we're rather shy on this altruistic stuff).

If we had the gymnastic minds of some boys, we'd have none of this deck-swabbing for a patriotic occupation. From discussing the hair-splitting question of why Guglio Dominico didn't come across with last week's board bill to barking out orders on a Scout Patrol in nine months requires more than average adaptation to conditions, and therefore we haul off our "beanies" in all due admiration of Roger Loughran, who is now an ensign on one of the slippery little crafts that are going to give the subs a neck-and-neck battle over on the other side. Mr Loughran (get that Mr?—he's got the gold stripe now), entered the Ensign School at Pelham Bay Park after quite some experience on an ocean-going tug as a second-class quartermaster. There were few of the class who pulled through the seven weeks' course as full-fledged ensigns, but Roger was one of them, wherefore the honor.

If Andie Murphy had not been the old "Ulster greyhound" that he was on the track in the old days, he too would be in a good position for a whack at the ensign job. He's been working his old bean like a good fellow ever since joining the outfit, in study, with a commission as goal, and the opportunity came for a shot at the Ensign School at Annapolis. Murph applied, but fell down on the physical exam. Pounding the old cinder paths had made Andie's pedals—oh, rather flattened out, doncherknow—and, although we'd think that flat feet would adhere better to a slippery deck than the other kind, still the navy has Spartan standards for her officers and there's no deviation. It was quite a disappointment, all right, but he still holds on to a second-class boatswain's mate rating, and is to be shipped on a Scout Patrol for a little sight-seeing, so there's some contentment left.

He's outside of our rate—not class, mind you, but not exactly in our jurisdiction—still we have to squeeze in a few words about Bill Cook. Remember Mr. Cook, the tall, brunette, dreamy-eyed skate who hung up all the athletic records as was polite to take up at old K. A.? Well, he's still crooping them in with the Amphibii Americani. Bill joined the State Militia last spring (we just can't see why he picked out such an outfit, but we'll let that slide) and got a pretty good training at Tarrytown together with the other crew from Kingston who were there. Just like the good old days, he scooted right along the line, first grabbing on a second-class boatswain's mate rating, and then a little later a first-class one at Pelham Bay Park, where he was transferred. Bill had the old officer stuff right in him evidently, because he was picked out for the Ensign School. The stiff course was a mere trifle, but before being eligible for a commission it was necessary to take a trip to sea. This done, he is now sticking around for the "comish." There's little doubt, though, and several tailors are now sizing up the boy. Yes, we'd appreciate Barmann's Drum Corps, but please don't make the boy walk—it's so awkward in a new "ossifer's" uniform.

We can stand a lot, but we just wish that somebody up home there would tell the trolley-car men that there's a navy uniform that is very much like theirs, but ain't. Bejabbers if Pete Crough didn't pounce on "Let" Elmendorf with more than usual fraternal feeling last time when he was home and gave him the mystic handshake. "Let" didn't come back with the right grip and Pete didn't understand until he looked up and saw the anchors on our sailor boy's hat. You see "Let" is a chief yeoman now, which means that he can boss the rest of the "fighting yeomen" all round the ship. For distinction, he wears a uniform that would pass for a conductor's anywhere, brass buttons, jacket, and all, but no more breezin' breeches. Pete's business of "picking up," self-styled, did some tall sprouting when he gathered in this little nugget of information about clandestine members of the lodge. Gone are the "gobs" for Elmendorf, and all the way from third-class to chief in eigth months is quite an achievement. Here's where we cultivate a beaming countenance.

Also in the yeomanry and also bouncing right along bloomingly is George Burgevin, advanced from third to second-class. If we all had only busied our beans a little in civilian life and learned another touch system than on the folks we wouldn't have to put "belles glaces" on much-besplintered maple decks for civilization. Burgevin, having completed training at Pelham is now at the Radio Station at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Albert Winne, who went to the Pelham Camp as a seaman some time ago, is now a quartermaster third-class. Winne is studying the signals hard, but confines himself to only four words in German—"Aufgeben Sie Sich, Hunde!" (surrender, you dogs), and then the rest of us are going to form a sort of a reception committee from the sub to our boat,—sabe?

Beans and prunes are agreeing very nicely with the rest of us, thanks. We didn't mean to keep you waiting so long, but wanted to wait till we had a good "scoop," and think we have succeeded this time. Next installment we'll try to entertain you with little dissertations on mermaids and octopuses and Frenchies and Huns and so forth, because we've been around these shores just about long enough and want to be lubbers no mo'.

Thanking you for your charitable attention, hoping that the girlies are not losing too much sleep in their wistful waiting, that the army boys are having just as good a time as we, and that the Freeman doesn't bust operations till we come back, we remain, ever thus,

A GOB FROM HOME.

WHY

Periscopes Are a Necessity on Locomotives

Inventions previously used exclusively for war purposes, are now finding their way into industry. Even the submarine, associated with destruction, has something to contribute. For instance, why not periscope for railway engineers? Why is it necessary for the engineer to lean out of his cab to see the track ahead of him, or the signal of the conductor or flagman in the rear of the train?

According to A. C. Spencer of London, England, periscopes would be a great help to all locomotives engineers, eliminating much danger and inconvenience.

He has invented two periscopes which can be attached to an ordinary locomotive cab, to enable the engineer to obtain an unobstructed view of the track ahead and of his train in the rear. The periscopes are supported by rubber or other flexible means in brackets, so that they can be readily adjusted in position or turned about a vertical or horizontal axis. The space between the periscope and the roof of the cab is filled with rubber rings.

One of the periscopes is telescopic and is in two parts held together by a wing-nut and a bolt. It is provided with windows, a removable cover and projections which bear against the securing clamps. The periscope may be of lazy-tongs type or otherwise adjustable in length, and the mirrors may be protected from smoke by a hood or casing.

So equipped, in an emergency, the engineer is able to see all that is necessary, without leaving his post at the throttle.

TRUE FAVORITE OF FORTUNE

How Longshoreman of Naples Has Become Popular Hero With Little Effort of His Own.

Maciste is rapidly supplanting the other Italian film heroes in popular affection, says a Naples (Italy) dispatch. He was formerly a longshoreman on the docks here. One day a film operator, taking the departure of a ship with some heroes and heroines of a film drama registering "farewells," asked the boss Stevedore to help him in the action by hustling in some longshoremen. "I'll get Maciste for you," was the answer.

Maciste, famous about the port for his size, strength and good humor, registered action so well that he became a part of the movie company. Today there is not a corner in Italy where he is unknown to movie enthusiasts.

He is particularly popular with children, who delight to see him use his giant's strength in annihilating some six or eight villains in a drama. His most popular film is that where he appears as an Alpine soldier, doing all kinds of dreadful things to Austrians.

WEALTH FROM ROCK SHALE

How Extraction of Oil Will Add Enormously to the Resources of the United States.

An interesting development, being watched by scientists, is in the extracting of oils and other products from rock shale. It will surprise many to know that the bureau of mines estimates that the exposed and known shale in Colorado and Utah will yield 36,000,000,000 gallons of oil—that is nearly 1,000,000,000 barrels.

In Scotland, where shale oil is produced on a commercial scale, for twenty-five years a dividend of from 8 to 30 per cent has been paid. In this country the shale rocks are found in the Dakotas, Wyoming, Montana, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico, besides those in the above states where the possible yield would be near 1,000,000,000 barrels.

Why Rat Is Farmer's Enemy.

The number of useful insect-eating birds nesting on the ground or in low bushes which fall victims to rats is extremely large and is one of the many kinds of injury done by these pernicious animals, which cannot be computed, writes E. W. Nelson in the National Geographic Magazine. Probably few frequenters of the countryside have returned to look into a bird's nest to observe its condition without many times finding it destroyed and fragments of egg shells lying about. Unquestionably a large percentage of such nests located in the neighborhood of buildings have been raided by rats.

On one of the small Danish islands it has been authentically recorded that the progeny of a single pair of rats, which escaped from captivity, in two years' time exterminated a great colony of birds for which the island had been noted.

Why Continuous Watering Benefits.

Lucien Daniel, a French botanist, has discovered that young hothouse plants and slips of vegetables, as well as flowers thrive far better by a system of continuous watering than by drenching the soil at stated periods. The new method depends upon the law of capillary attraction. Near each plant is placed a jar containing water, into which is dipped one end of a strip of linen or cotton, whose other end lies near the plant. With this uninterrupted supply of water, drop by drop, the plants thrived, greatly outdistancing other plants, which were submitted to an intermittent drenching.

FOR FRITZ'S SAKE

By MAUNA COWLES.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"It is perfectly outrageous for you to go on talking German," Mrs. Van Bergen told her daughter Freda, as they approached the hotel where the Van Bergens had their winter apartments. Freda raised two Teutonic eyes to her mother appealingly. "But Fritz cannot understand English," she said. "Can you, Fritzi, dear?" At which a very long short-legged dachshund, whose silky coat showed Freda's devoted care, wagged his tail and flapped his ears.

"Well, of course you will do as you choose—you always do," said Mrs. Van Bergen. "But I think you are taking risks. You are a perfect Gretchen type."

"But Van Bergen isn't German—it's Holland Dutch," insisted Freda. "And anyway, I'm sure I don't look like a spy."

"You can never tell," reiterated the mother. "Sometimes simple-looking people are shrewd enough, and it would be just like the Huns to make an accomplice of a simple little Gretchen—and that's what you look like."

The next morning, as she was taking her breakfast in the Van Bergen apartment, with the cherished Fritz sitting on a cushion in a chair at her side—for Freda breakfasted an hour or so before her parents—she glanced at the headline in a newspaper, emitted a little shriek of fright, and then began to fondle Fritz's soft long ears because she needed some encouragement. The article whose headlines she had read told of the taking of a girl as a spy, and of the suspicion entertained by the secret service men of three or four women accomplices. One of them, the account said, was a blonde young German girl of the perfect Gretchen type. Soon, however, Freda forgot her fright and she was light-hearted and joyous when she started forth from the hotel with Fritz.

When Freda returned her mother had gone out for a shopping tour and again her only companion was Fritz. He sat beside her as she practiced a Beethoven sonata on the piano. The telephone sounded and presently her mother's maid came to her to say that a Mr. Drew wished to speak to her. But as Freda had never heard of a Mr. Drew and did not wish to interrupt her practicing she asked the maid to take the message.

"He says he is very sorry, miss, to disturb you, but all he wants to know is whether or not you're a German."

Freda thought immediately of the headlines she had seen in the paper.

"I can't imagine why he wants to know," she said. "Will you please ask him who he is and what his business is."

The maid returned, saying that Mr. Drew realized that he had been abrupt, but he would call and explain himself at the apartment.

All Freda's fears returned and, gathering Fritz in her arms, she hurried to her room.

Presently the maid came to her room, bearing a card. Under the name of Mr. Drew there was the simple words, "National Detective Bureau," and the address of that concern.

"He says if he could please to see you, he would explain why he was intruding," the maid said.

Freda's round blue eyes were rounder and bluer than ever, and her heart had never before beaten so fast. "If I had only taken mother's advice," she whispered to Fritz in German. "Tell him I'm—I'm ill," she said to the maid. "And if he starts to search the apartment," she added with trembling voice, "Why, you'll know I've gone down the fire escape."

Mr. Drew did not attempt to search the apartment, but he told the maid he was extremely sorry to have bothered Miss Van Bergen, and that he was surprised that she was ill, since he had seen her that morning.

Freda kept to her room the rest of the day. She did not want to go without dinner, for she was hungry. Besides, if she said she was ill, she would be treated as an invalid, and this she detested. What she finally did was to slip away before dinner time, leaving word with her mother's maid that she had gone to dine with a chum and would be back right after dinner. The chum with whom she wished to dine was not at home, and what refreshments she did have that night she got at a French pastry shop.

When she came back, she found her mother and father, whom she had not seen before that day, and there was something in her mother's manner as she greeted her in the hall that told her that a guest was present, and that she should be on her best behavior.

The guest was Henry Drew. Her father had recently discovered him to be the son of one of his best friends. Everything in Freda's parents' manner showed supreme approval of the young man.

"I especially tried to get in touch with you this morning," Mr. Drew told Freda as soon as they could have a little tete-a-tete conversation. "It was awfully impertinent of me, but you see I'm working for my uncle—the one that has a detective business—and I'm on a shop-lifting case—trying to locate some stolen goods."

"Then you—you don't think I'm a spy?" she said. "And you don't think I'm that Gretchen girl with the dachshund they've been trying to find?"

"I think you are the most charming little girl in the world," said Mr. Drew.

Highly Cultured Indians.

It is manifest that in prehistoric times parts of Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico were inhabited by tribes of Indians representing a culture unlike any to be found elsewhere in North America. Their skill in agriculture and expertness as builders of elaborate structures of dressed stone—such stuctures as existed nowhere else north of Mexico—would alone suffice to set them apart as a people wholly distinct.

Friday.

Breakfast—Orange slices, rolled oats with top milk and *maple sugar, *hominy grits spoon bread, *coffee.

Lunch or Supper—Salsify au gratin, quartered browned potatoes, *gingerbread with whipped cream.

Dinner—Broiled mackerel steaks, creamed potatoes, home canned string beans, *fruit jelly with nuts.

*May be omitted and still leave a balanced meal.

Milk for children to drink at each meal.

Hot breads made from wheat substitutes are much more easily and entirely digested if the cereal is scalded or partly cooked before it is used in the bread. Spoon bread, an old southern dish, is an example of this kind of bread, and it is delicious. As the name implies, it must be served with a spoon from the dish in which it is baked. With more and more families adding their names to the wheatless "honor roll," these tempting hot breads come into greater favor.

Hominy Grits Spoon Bread.

2 cups water, 1 cup milk, 1 cup hominy grits, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 eggs.

Add the hominy grits to the boiling water and bring slowly to the boiling point. Cook for 5 minutes. Add the eggs well beaten, milk, butter and the salt. Beat thoroughly and bake in a well greased pan about 30 minutes in a hot oven. Serve from the same dish with a spoon.

Gingerbread (100 Per Cent Wheat Substitute).

½ cup fat, 1½ cups molasses, 1 cup boiling water, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 cup corn flour, 1 cup buckwheat flour, 2 eggs.

Cream the fat and add the molasses and the boiling water. Add the sifted dry ingredients to the first mixture. Add the eggs last. Bake the cake in a loaf or in a shallow pan in a moderate oven.

Recipes for any of the dishes in these menus which cannot be found in cook books may be had by writing to the Department of Home Economics, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

Why my filmiest curtains never tear in the laundry

I USED to hang my dainty new curtains with a sigh, dreading from the beginning the ominous day when they would have to be spoiled in the laundry.

Now I never give them a thought—I have found how easy it is to keep them always fresh and new.

I wash them the modern way in pure Lux suds, and with no rubbing. The dainty Lux flakes dissolve instantly in hot water and whip up into rich, pure suds. I souse the sheer lacey curtains in the foamy lather—gently squeeze the cleansing Lux suds through them again and again, then take them out so clean and fresh, with not a thread broken.

With Lux there is none of that old-time rubbing to break and tear the sheer material—there are no particles of undissolved soap to cling to the delicate threads through all the rinsings, and coarsen and yellow them.

Try Lux for your laciest curtains—for your fragile laces and finest table linen. See for yourself how simple it is to keep them white and pure. Your grocer, druggist or department store has Lux. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How to wash fine curtains

Shake the dust carefully out of the curtains, then let them soak in clear, cold water for an hour to loosen the dirt!

Use a tablespoonful of Lux to a gallon of water. Dissolve in boiling or very hot water, and whisk into a thick lather. Put the curtains in and souse thoroughly. Squeeze the suds through the fabric. Do not rub. Rinse three times in clear, hot water, and dry in the sun.

Silk and Colored Curtains should not be soaked. Wet in cold water, then wash quickly in lukewarm suds, rinse three times in clear, luke-warm water, and dry in the shade.

A SECOND IMPERATIVE TASK.

A danger long since recognized by thoughtful observers is pointed out by Lord Robert Cecil, England's Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs, when he says: "Of course it has proved futile to prophesy in this war, but I believe that the German general plan is, supposing that they can not win a decisive victory over the Allies, to go on fighting in the west until they have acquired complete commercial control over the east. If they once really establish themselves in Russia there is no reason why they should not fight the whole world forever." He might have added that their grip on Russia is stronger and more extended every day. Since they made "peace" with the foolish Bolsheviki they have continued advancing and grabbing as industriously as before.

Obviously there are two reasons why American haste to put forth great and ever greater strength is most urgent. We need to go quickly to the aid of the British and French who have lost heavily in man power since the great German drive began on March 21, for the Germans are hurrying to accomplish all they can before decisive American reinforcements arrive. And this, our first task, we need to accomplish quickly in order to give powerful aid in performing the scarcely less urgent task of frustrating the German plan of acquiring vast resources and impregnable power for years to come by extending the Teutonic grip throughout Russia. The Bolshevik leaders may deserve to feel the weight of the Kaiser's heel, but the interests of all the Allies demand Russia's rescue.

DAMNING INDICTMENTS.

To Irvin Cobb's account of Hun brutality to prisoners (from official reports) in the Saturday Evening Post for April 27 and C. Journelle's narrative of hideous atrocities in the current Atlantic Monthly has been added Elinor Glyn's pen-picture of the horrors of German occupation in northern France. The last mentioned chronicle is none the less convincing because, as would naturally be expected of the author of "Three Weeks," it frankly gives space to matters which a mere man would only dare to hint at or shrink from even mentioning. Mrs. Glyn tells of Prince Eitel Fritz's "pleasure house," for example, and describes the despair of a wounded French gentleman whose wife aged 40 and daughters of 20 and 16 are all soon to give birth to offspring sired by German officers while they occupied his chateau, which was left a veritable ruin and dunghill before it was again included within the French lines. The Cobb, Journelle and Glyn accounts, taken together, furnish a damning indictment, a picture of barbarous cruelty, bestiality and animalism for which the records of the worst savagery of past ages fail to offer a parallel. It is like being bespattered with filth to read a complete story of German atrocities, but nevertheless the good of the great cause demands that our eyes be fully opened.

CONSCRIPT SCOTT'S RAZOR.

As Shenandoah, Pa., has a population of 28,000, it seems unaccountable that Conscript Henry Scott was the only one of its citizens called under the latest draft, but such is the case according to the account before us of the festivities in honor of its only and thus highly distinguished draftee, including a banquet, whereat it appears that the draftee was thus addressed by the District Attorney: "Henry, you are done heaving coal for a while. You are going away to be a soldier. When you get over there shoot straight. Use well your ammunition. There are times when a country, even a great country like ours, runs out of ammunition. In such exigencies it will be your duty not only to carry in your hip pocket a razor but to flash it effectively."

Apparently this advice was superfluous, for Conscript Scott promptly confessed: "I always carries a razor and I sho will have one handy when I get mixed up with them Germans." He made his intention clear that if he didn't get them with a gun, he would do his best to "get 'em with a razor." After this convincing statement of preparedness Conscript Scott assured his fellow townsmen that he "sho would be proud and happy" to have his folks in old Virginia see him the center of attraction—or words to that effect—in the good democratic town of Shenandoah. Then he proudly marched to the station, escorted by the Lithuanian Brass Band and carrying his most favored weapon with him. The Prussian, however, big and confident, who encounters a black soldier in No Man's Land opposite the American lines would do well to decline a hand-to-hand tussle. An infuriated darkey plus a sharp razor is a combination liable to reduce the toughest of Huns to thin slices.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"Who breaks, pays." "That shows you don't know anything about being broke."—Baltimore American.

The Politician—"I see you farmers believe in putting good men in office." Farmer Corntossel—"Yep! The best that money can buy."—Life.

"Think this winter will ever end?" "I see signs," said the rural editor. "A few timid poems on spring are beginning to seep in."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Why did he marry her at all if he intended getting a divorce so speedily?" "Because he didn't think it would be honorable to break the engagement."—Boston Transcript.

Husband—"I'm glad you only want five dollars to go shopping with today. What are you going to get with it?" Wife—"Nothing but luncheon, dear. I'm going to have everything else charged."—Judge.

A Day Will Come.

Governor Whitman said at a dinner in Albany:

"The Allies are determined to fight on 'till militarism is destroyed. Germany is very arrogant now, but a day will come!

"Germany on that day will be a dead like the German who went fishing, and the Allies, maybe, will be as unsympathetic as the Irishman on the dock.

"'I can't swim!'

"An Irishman sat with his eye on his float, and made no attempt at a rescue.

"The German sank a second time, came up and shouted again.

"'I can't swim!'

"The Irishman fished calmly on.

"A third time the German sank, and the third time he came up and roared:

"'I can't swim!'

"The Irishman as he took a chew of tobacco, gave a laugh.

"'Well, it's a bloomin' funny time to brag about it,' he said."—Exchange.

Long Ride Before Him.

A cyclist who stopped at a village inn boasted about his abilities as a rider to such an extent that the landlord ventured to make a wager with him.

"Look here, mister," said the innkeeper, "you can't ride up and down this road 'till the church clock strikes six."

"Done," said the cyclist. "It's just close to 5 now;" and; the next minute he was speeding down the road.

After about an hour's riding the cyclist shouted to one of the bystanders, of whom many had assembled:

"I say, has the church clock struck six yet?"

"No, you idiot," was the blunt reply. "Our church clock never strikes at all."—London Tit-Bits.

The Cheerful Steward.

In the boat trip to Mexico the rough going produced that feeling among troopers which made it a matter of absolute indifference to them when the world came to an end, just so it came quick. On an army transport was a steward named Terry. Before the mess call sounded Terry always visited the different state rooms. Pushing the door ajar he could say to the officers:

"Gentlemen, do you wish me to throw your luncheon overboard, or will you do it yourself?"—Pittsburgh Post.

Don't Be a Slackeress!

Women of the country, wake up! The time has come for you to act! Wherever you are, the government is in immediate need of your help!

Just as surely as the country requires at once the aid of all its intelligent, able bodied young men, so it is in urgent need of the services of each and every woman. Furthermore, there is no age limit. Every female, from the little school-girl to the aged woman can and should help!

Three lines of work are open, one at least of which you should be able to do, no matter who, where or what you are. Choose it now.

First, if you are incapacitated in other ways, you can at least learn to knit. The blind do this beautifully, and it is even recommended as quieting to the insane. Our millions of boys in the service will need plenty of warm sweaters and wristlets next winter. Get busy now.

Second, if you stop to think of the awful carnage going on abroad every day, you will realize the pressing need of all the Red Cross bandages and surgical dressings we can possibly get ready, working night and day. Go to the nearest headquarters and take a course, so you can do this work in your spare moments. If your little town has no Red Cross unit, appeal to your nearest city, where arrangements can be made to get an instructor. Then do your part in your own comfortable home, to help the sick and suffering. Sew for the destitute women and children.

Third you can produce food. Today we are in greater need than ever before in the history of our country. The whole world is looking to us for help. We simply can not fail those who have nowhere else to turn for the very necessities of life. Raise all you can for your own consumption, and thus lessen the demand on bigger growers. Don't waste time and space on lettuce, radishes and other such non-essentials. Put in the things that will count next winter—carrots, turnips beets, po'atoes and all the other vegetables that can easily be stored without canning. A few cents expended for seed now will produce many dollars' worth of fresh green stuff that possibly will keep you from hunger next winter. The U. S. Department of Agriculture will furnish free booklets on raising everything from a head of cabbage to a field of corn, and we should put every available foot of ground under cultivation at once.

Women and children make fine gardeners. Do your part by starting a garden immediately. Enthuse your neighbors. Help the country break its glorious record in world food production.

Here are but three of many lines of work. Choose one and then go to it.

Don't be a slackeress!—By Olive Hyde Foster of The Vigilantes.

Had His Nerve.

BOY SCOUTS AGAIN RESPOND FOR DUTY

Another opportunity for the Boy Scouts to serve the community has been given by Postmaster DeWitt in his request that the Scouts act as ushers at the mass meeting for the promotion of the sale of war stamps to be held at the high school this evening.

The Boy Scouts have been in the campaign for the sale of the W. S. S. for several weeks but owing to their work in the Liberty Loan, thrift stamp sales have taken a slump. Scouts should attend this meeting not alone for the purpose of ushering but that they may get an inspiration to renew their efforts to help win the war.

Scouts are requestd to report at the high school at 7:15, when they will be assigned to duty as ushers and orderlies.

The Girl Scouts have been invited to attend in a body and seats will be reserved for them.

The following communication has been received at Scout headquarters:

Kingston, May 8, 1918.

To the Boy Scouts of Kingston and the Girl Scouts of Kingston.

The Sons of Vet. Aux. No. 53, of Tappen Camp, No. 1, wish to extend an invitation to you to be their guests at Mother's Day services at the Clinton Ave. Methodist Church Sunday evening, May 12th.

(Signed) EMMA E. DE GRAFF, Secretary.

This invitation is greatly appreciated by both organizations and many Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts will attend the service.

Owing to the fact that the Scout organization is made up of members of the Catholic, Jewish and Protestant faiths and the ruling in our national constitution concerning nonsectarianism, it is impossible to accept this invitation officially or to issue an order for Scouts to attend, but it is hoped that Scouts who can, will attend.

ONLY THE RED CROSS CAN SEND MESSAGES

Inquiries Between Persons in the United States and Enemy Countries Can Be Exchanged Only Through That Organization.

The Post Office Department authorizes the following:

Postmaster General Burleson announces that arrangement has been made for sending personal welfare inquiries and messages between persons in the United States and persons in enemy countries and in territory occupied by the enemy.

The inquiries and messages can be sent only through the American Red Cross in the manner, and on the blank forms prescribed for the purpose and must not be sent direct between individuals or accepted by post offices from individuals. Full details regarding the transmission of the messages may be obtained upon application to any Red Cross chapter.

The sending to enemy countries through the Red Cross of messages other than as above indicated, except prisoners of war mail, is forbidden by law, and will render the persons attempting to send them liable to prosecution.

BANQUET FOR RICHTER.

Farewell Affair For National Army Conscript Who Leaves Saturday.

A number of the friends of Harry Richter tendered him a banquet at Marz Hotel on Tuesday evening, May 7th. "Rick," as he is better known among his many friends, leaves Saturday in the draft contingent and carries with him the best wishes of his host of friends. The banqueting table was handsomely and artistically decorated for the occasion with flowers and each guest wore a carnation. One the finest menus ever served at this place was served to the eighteen guests who sat down to the table after the toast given by Mr. Walmsley to Mr. Richter. After and during the meal a number of appropriate addresses were made by many of the guests, each and every one wishing Mr. Richter the best of success. Among those present were: The Misses Kathryn Keiterer, Peggy Webster, Billie Oakley, Georgiana Whitaker, Martha Wingert, Mary Oakley, Hazel Van DeBogart, Mrs. Julia Davenport, Mrs. Jacob Goedtel, the honored guest, Harry Richter, George F. Dingee, A. J. Keator, Edward Wortman, Edwin Cusack, Claude Kieffer, Lucullus Dunn, Russell Walmsley and Jacob Goedtel.

Stay Slender.

Body fat is stored-up energy. Keep your energy in circulation—not in storage. Don't be afraid of potatoes. Eat plenty of them. Use up the energy they give you for your war work and stay slender.

Eat well, work hard, be patriotic. Write the United States Department of Agriculture for new potato recipes.

Law of Averages.

Some railroad official engaged in winning the war for democracy has figured it out that, after you have traveled 16,000,000 miles, your turn to be killed in an accident is at hand. That settles it. When ir speedometer registers 15,999,9 miles, we are going to travel the r t of the way afoot.

TOURIST STRAW HAT

This tourist hat is of lizard-green straw. It has a high crown, narrow brim, and rather effective wings on each side.

HOW TO KEEP UP THE STRAPS

Tiny Gold Safety Pin, Covered Over by Sewed-On Pink Rose, Found to Be Satisfactory.

An appearance that might otherwise be the pink of perfection for a woman is often very much marred by the straps of her underwear, which slip, each a different way, from her shoulders and show through the thin blouse. The only solution to this state of affairs when one affects the strap kind of lingerie is some sort of lingerie clasps. Of course, the little gold ones are very fetching, but there are some which can be made almost in a jiffy, and make attractive gifts and favors at parties where girls foregather.

One girl specializes on tiny gold safety pins, sewing atop of them to hide the pin one of those small pink roses which can be bought by the yard. Roses rolled from pink ribbon would answer just as well.

Another girl embroiders hers, using linen or a heavy ribbon, half an inch wide, and buttonholes the edges. Then she sews snaps on them, half on each end, and they are ready to clasp over any number of truant straps. A circle of French knots covers the sewing from the snaps.

Ribbons with a bow on one end, provided with snaps will do the work efficiently and artistically, too.

The crocheter will find it easy to make these little clasps, finishing off the narrow band with a small crocheted rose or shamrock.

NEWER BLOUSES ARE CLOSED

Garments So Arranged That the Deep Collar at the Back Need Not Be Disturbed.

The new blouses are closed in a number of fashions and many of them are ingeniously contrived so that the deep collar at the back need not be disturbed. One model is made with a deep enough V-shaped opening at the front so that it slips over the head—if the head is not too large. This blouse, therefore, has no visible means of closing—or opening. And it is very pretty and the full front falls in unbroken folds and the deep collar of the back is uninterrupted.

And if one puts this blouse on carefully, pulling it smoothly over the hair, it is all very well.

A newer method of getting around the difficulty of the deep collar in the back or the collar across the back, which marks so many of the new blouses, and the desire for the unbroken front, is to slit up the back from the waistline for a few inches—say five or six.

The matter of pulling the blouse over the head is then much simplified, and the results gained are about the same. Moreover, the little buttoned opening at the bottom of the back of the blouse, is, if anything, of decorative value.

OUR FRILLS AND FURBELOWS

Items of Fashion That Should Be of Especial Interest to Women Seeking Latest in Styles.

Gray and yellow make a pretty combination.

Small poke-shaped hats are in evidence.

Satin is used for dresses, suits and hats.

Kilted plaids are much in favor for skirts.

Wool embroideries are more than ever used.

There must be a note of contrast in the dress.

Flag blue is combined with gray and chamois.

Sashes are tied at one side, under the left arm.

The slip-on coat is one that Paris is very fond of.

Wool hophacking is to be used for motor wraps.

White silk is promised for spring suits and dresses.

The corset which laces in back is growing in favor.

The straight Japanese sleeve is one much favored.

Knife Plaitings Good.

Knife plaitings are a very popular trimming, for sheer summer frocks. They are especially adapted to organdies or any striped materials that require little other trimming. These plaitings are also good when used to edge the surplice fronts of a dress that tie in the back in a big bow.

HOW PHYSICIANS CAN LOCATE SEAT OF PAIN IN THE HUMAN BODY.

—I asked an ex-surgeon of the United States army this question: "Now, suppose a man comes before you and says he is in pain, how can you tell if he is in pain or not?" His reply was: "You can't tell; you have got to take his word for it."

I have discovered this fact, that when there is pain in any part of the body there will be a tension of pulse and contraction of the pupil of the eye, reports Dr. Eli G. Jones. If there is no tension of the pulse and no contraction of the pupil of the eye there is no pain.

I have also discovered that there is a great difference between the pulse of the right and left arm. The pulse of one arm will tell us of the vitality, the constitution of the sick person; the pulse of the other arm will tell us of the local trouble, whatever it may be, also the real, true condition of the patient. When the pulses of both wrists are alike, full, strong and regular, the patient is nearly well.

Some of the most prominent physicians in the country are testing this discovery in their practice, for it is one of the most important yet made in this century.

EXPLAINING SHORTAGE OF ICE

Why Summer May Be a Period of Shortage and Tribulation to the Average Housekeeper.

Next summer may see a bad shortage of ice. Scarcity of labor has been interfering with the cutting of river and lake ice this season, and hampered by shortages of the chief products necessary for ice manufacture—coal and ammonia.

Some time ago the government called a conference of the ice manufacturers and asked them to economize in their use of coal. One of the suggestions was that some of the plants shut down and buy their ice for storage purposes from those in working order at cost price. It costs but a little bit more to turn out 100 tons of ice than it costs to turn out 50. That is, once a plant is set going it can, with very little more labor and power, turn out a largely increased product. So, of course, a ton of ice made in a factory that turns out 100 tons a day is much cheaper than a ton made in one where 50 tons is the daily output. It was a good business proposition, then, for the ice manufacturers to pool their ammonia and set the bigger plants going at highest capacity, and the government caused the saving of a considerable amount of coal.

TOWN NAMED FROM POT HOLE

How Important Industrial City of the East Got Appellation Which Has No Mate in History.

Canajoharie, N. Y. (the only town of the name in the world), derives its Indian name, meaning "The Pot that Washes Itself," from a large pot hole in the bed of the Canajoharie creek.

This natural curiosity is a hole about fifteen feet in diameter worn in the solid limestone bed of the creek by the action of the water, says Boy's Life, the Boy Scouts' magazine. In the days of the Indians it was supposed to be bottomless, but as the years have rolled on landslides have filled it to within about ten feet of the surface.

The pot hole is situated at the mouth of a gorge cut through the slate and limestone rocks. About a mile above is a beautiful fall fifty feet in height, at the top of which is a sulphur spring which the Mohawks used for medicinal purposes.

Why Hen Likes or Dislikes You.

"Hens are funny sorts of creatures," observes a poultry fancier. "They have their likes and dislikes—especially dislikes. If you move a hen she turns crusty, and won't lay eggs. She likes her old home, and takes an abominable time to get used to the new.

"If you wave a cloth within sight of the occupants of your fowl run, you will hear a shocking row. This particular noise is known as the 'danger signal,' and sometimes will be indulged in without a single break for as long as twenty minutes.

"If you take it into your head to rearrange the nest boxes, depend upon it Biddy will pay you out. She will miss that day with her usual egg.

"Provided they are good, it's wisest to stick to old things in poultry keeping, and not to shift them unless you are compelled to do so. At least, there's one thing you can change and that's the fodder. Hens won't object to that at all; in fact, they like it."

THE CABIN

By NEWTON LAWRENCE.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Old Wilder's cutting timber on the ledge," the big voice of Doctor Frost boomed from the hallway, and the tread of his great lumberman's boots shook the frail New Hampshire farmhouse.

Carroll Larue, wrapped in a patchwork quilt, in an armchair by the window, did not look up when he entered, or answer his cheery: "How's the little patient, this cold morning?"

His bit of gossip about old Wilder cutting timber, had brought two dull red patches into her pale cheeks, and she feared to meet the doctor's kindly, piercing eyes. "Could it be," she asked herself, "that he knew—that he knew, how she and Jim had planned to build their house among the pines on that ledge, when Jim got his patents—and sold them?"

So she stared at the glass of potash and water, covered with a saucer, on the window sill, and her mother answered for her: "She's just the same, doctor. Gargles her throat with potash, and takes the tonic you left for her. But she doesn't take any interest. Are you sure, doctor, that it's not—that it isn't—?"

"Consumption! Bah!" snorted the doctor. "There's just one thing more than this influenza that's the matter with her, and that's—. Well, it's psychological. Not a case for a pathologist at all," and he pulled up a chair beside her.

From the corners of her eyes, Carroll saw his huge bulk in its shaggy fur coat settled into the chair. The coat and his beard were frosty, where his breath had condensed and frozen.

"Here you are, young lady," he announced, brusquely, and slipped a thermometer between her lips. "Smoke that for a while, and listen to me.

"You and Jim Langley were both born on Christmas day twenty-two years ago. And I've known you both just that long. There isn't a likelier girl than you in Claremont county; but Jim, well, he's a ne'er-do-well, a dreamer. He lost his job at the electric company for wasting the company's time on his fool inventions and such. You know more about that than I do, because you worked in Mr. Thompson's office and earned more money, I'll bet, than he did in the shop.

"But now, because Jim's gone off to the city on a wild-goose chase, most likely, there's no use losing your grip on yourself, little girl, and moping."

The girl said nothing, but shook her head slowly, and looked out across the snow-covered fields toward the dark fringe of pines on Wilder's ledge.

Later she watched the doctor's cutter disappear down the road. Then she crossed the room to a writing desk, and took out a letter—Jim's last.

It was written in New York, and there was the picture of a hotel on the envelope. It began:

"Dearest Carroll: They won't take any interest in my invention. And I'm almost discouraged. I can't manage to see anyone in the big electric companies who has authority to buy my direct-current converter, if they wanted it. They all say, 'we'll investigate, and let you know, Mr. Langley.'

"It's six weeks now, but I'll stay until the converter's marketed, if it's forever. What's the use coming back before? I couldn't get a job paying enough for us both to live on—even if we didn't build the cabin on Wilder's ledge by the lake. And I simply won't have you working for that Thompson after we're married."

If Jim could only understand, she thought, looking up from the letter, that it was he with his dreams and fancies, his imagination that she wanted. What if they did call him a ne'er-do-well? What if he was? She wanted him.

What if some of his dreams didn't come true? They couldn't all come true. And so, with a little sigh she turned back to the letter.

"D'y know," it went on, "that it's only the thought of you, and our cabin on the rocks above the lake with the little workshop behind, that gives me any courage at all. Well it surely does; and it's the only thing, sometimes, when I come in feeling downhearted and blue, that makes me put out the gas in the usual way."

She laid down the letter, and again looked out toward Wilder's ledge where they were cutting. It was an irridescent day, and the snow glittered blue-white in the sunshine. The jagged rocks of the ledge showed deep purple above the white fields, zigzagged by dark rail fences.

Even as she looked, one of the great pines on the top of the ledge seemed to topple and disappear.

"So that's the end of another dream," she thought, with a choking sensation in her throat. And she reached for her handkerchief.

There was a hollow crunch of footsteps on the front porch. The front door banged, her own burst open. And there stood Jim.

In the instant before he dashed across the room and caught her up, she noticed his new fur coat and city-cut clothes.

"I sold the patents," he shouted, "to Westinghouse. Six thousand and royalties," he added, jubilantly.

An hour later, her eyes shining, too, her face moist, and her breath a little choky, she said: "Jim, dear, they're cutting off the timber on Wilder's ledge."

"Yes," said Jim, "to build our cabin. It's Langley's ledge, now, dear. Here's the deed."

Why He Eats But One Meal A Day.

The man who thinks he is living the simple life on three Hooverized meals a day ought to know C. B. Woodhead, a rancher of Los Angeles county, Cal. Woodhead has been living on one meal a day for fifty years. He is seventy-two years old and is a veteran of the Civil war. He started his one meal a day program soon after the Civil war and has kept to it. "I eat my one meal," he says, "at night just before bedtime, when a man gets his digestion up to normal, and he can eat and sleep like any other animal. I eat no more than any other person at a meal. I feel very fit and expect to live many more years. I don't smoke and I don't drink."

Powerful Exterminator.

In India and Australia a rat and rabbit exterminator was tested some time ago. It consists of an outer and inner metal shell, like one small egg in a larger one. In the outer shell is sulphuric acid, in the inner metal egg is dry cyanide of potash. The outer shell is filled with acid and placed in the rat hole or burrow, and all rat holes are tightly sealed. After an hour or so the acid eats into the cyanide and turns loose a lot of deadly prussic acid gas.

Convenient Wrist Watch.

"I can't understand why the public make such a joke of the wrist watch," said the knut to the hardened sinner. "I'm sure it's a great convenience."

"Yes. With the old kind of watch I always had to unbutton my coat and fish in every one of my waistcoat pockets for it. Now I have to unbutton my coat, fish in every one of my waistcoat pockets, discover that the watch isn't there, push up my sleeve, and look at it. A great convenience!"

OUR SAILORS IN NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN

Dear Folks:

Not having had much more contact with navigation than an occasional ducking in Kingston creek or an after-school swim off the Island Dock, we didn't expect much of ourselves in this new job of ours of "prepping" for the big game of 'unting the unter-sea uns, but as things are turning out quite rosy for all of us by way of promotions, we just have to open up and shoot home our jubilation.

Perhaps there's a little cockiness in that deck swagger of ours as we promenade along the streets back home on leave, but you can just stuff it down with your Mullen's, folks, there's a reason for our ebullition. Witness the following exploits extraordinary of a few of us Naval Reserves (the other boys, militia and regulars, will have to get busy with their press agent, because we're rather shy on this altruistic stuff).

If we had the gymnastic minds of some boys, we'd have none of this deck-swabbing for a patriotic occupation. From discussing the hair-splitting question of why Guglio Dominico didn't come across with last week's board bill to barking out orders on a Scout Patrol in nine months requires more than average adaptation to conditions, and therefore we haul off our "beanies" in all due admiration of Roger Loughran, who is now an ensign on one of the slippery little crafts that are going to give the subs a neck-and-neck battle over on the other side. Mr Loughran (get that Mr^—he's got the gold stripe now), entered the Ensign School at Pelham Bay Park after quite some experience on an ocean-going tug as a second-class quartermaster. There were few of the class who pulled through the seven weeks' course as full-fledged ensigns, but Roger was one of them wherefore the honor.

If Andie Murphy had not been the old "Ulster greyhound" that he was on the track in the old days, he too would be in a good position for a whack at the ensign job. He's been working his old bean like a good fellow ever since joining the outfit, in study with a commission as goal and the opportunity came for a shot at the Ensign School at Annapolis. Murph applied but fell down on the physical exam. Pounding the old cinder paths had made Andie's pedals—oh, rather flattened out, donche-know—and although we'd think that flat feet would adhere better to a slippery deck than the other kind, still the navy has Spartan standards for her officers and there's no deviation. It was quite a disappointment, all right, but he still holds on to a second-class boatswain's mate rating, and is to be shipped on a Scout Patrol for a little sight-seeing, so there's some contentment left.

He's outside of our rate—not class, mind you, but not exactly in our jurisdiction—still we have to squeeze in a few words about Bill Cook. Remember Mr Cook, the tall, brunette dreamy-eyed skate who hung up all the athletic records as was polite to take up at old K. A.? Well, he's still crossing them in with the Amphibii Americans. Bill joined the State Militia last spring (we just can't see why he picked out such an outfit but we'll let that slide) and got a pretty good training at Tarrytown together with the other crew from Kingston who were there. Just like the good old days, he scooted right along the line first grabbing on a second-class boatswain's mate rating, and then a little later a first-class one at Pelham Bay Park, where he was transferred. Bill had the old officer stuff right in him evidently, because he was picked out for the Ensign School. The stiff course was a mere trifle, but before being eligible for a commission it was necessary to take a trip to sea. This done, he is now stacking around for the "comish." There's little doubt though and several tailors are now sizing up the boy. Yes, we'd appreciate Barmann's Drum Corps, but please don't make the boy walk—it's so awkward in a new "ossifer's" uniform.

We can stand a lot, but we just wish that somebody up home there would tell the trolley-car men that there's a navy uniform that is very much like theirs but ain't Bejabbers if Pete Crough didn't pounce on "Let" Elmendorf with more than usual fraternal feeling last time when he was home and gave him the mystic hand-shake. "Let" didn't come back with the right grip and Pete didn't understand until he looked up and saw the anchors on our sailor boy's hat. You see "Let" is a chief yeoman now, which means that he can boss the rest of the "fighting yeomen" all round the ship. For distinction, he wears a uniform that would pass for a conductor's anywhere, brass buttons, jacket, and all, but no more breezin' breeches. Pete's business of "picking up" self-styled did some fast sprouting when he gathered in this little nugget of information about clandestine members of the lodge. Gone are the "gobs" for Elmendorf, and all the way from third-class to chief in eight months is quite an achievement. Here's where we cultivate a beaming countenance.

Also in the yeomanry and also booming right along bloomingly is George Burgevin, advanced from third to second-class. If we all had only busted our beans a little in civilian life and learned another tough system than on the folks we wouldn't have to put "belles glaces" on mano-besplintered maple decks for civilization Burgevin, having completed training at Pelham is now at the Radio Station at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Albert Winne, who went to the Pelham Camp as a seaman some time ago, is now a quartermaster third-class. Winne is studying the signals hard, but confines himself to only four words in German—"Aufgeben Sie Sich Hunden!" (surrender, you dogs!), and then the rest of us are going to form a sort of a reception committee from the sub to our boat.—Ed.

Bears and prunes are agreeing very nicely with the rest of us, thanks. We didn't mean to keep you waiting so long, but wanted to wait till we had a good "scoop," and think we have succeeded this time. Next installment we'll try to entertain you with little dissertations on mermaids and octonuses and Frenchies and Huns and so forth, because we've been around these shores just about long enough and want to be lubbers no mo.

Thanking you for your charitable attention hoping that the girlies are not losing too much sleep in their wistful waiting, that the army boys are having just as good a time as we, and that the Freeman doesn't bust operations till we come back, we remain ever thus,

A GOB FROM HOME.

WHY

Periscopes Are a Necessity on Locomotives

Inventions previously used exclusively for war purposes, are now finding their way into industry. Even the submarine, associated with destruction, has something to contribute. For instance, why not periscope for railway engineers? Why is it necessary for the engineer to lean out of his cab to see the track ahead of him, or the signal of the conductor or flagman in the rear of the train?

According to A. C. Spencer of London, England, periscopes would be a great help to all locomotives engineers, eliminating much danger and inconvenience.

He has invented two periscopes which can be attached to an ordinary locomotive cab, to enable the engineer to obtain an unobstructed view of the track ahead and of his train in the rear. The periscopes are supported by rubber or other flexible means in brackets, so that they can be readily adjusted in position or turned about a vertical or horizontal axis. The space between the periscope and the roof of the cab is filled with rubber rings.

One of the periscopes is telescopic and is in two parts held together by a wing-nut and a bolt. It is provided with windows, a removable cover and projections which bear against the securing clamps. The periscope may be of lazy-tongs type or otherwise adjustable in length, and the mirrors may be protected from smoke by a hood or casing.

So equipped, in an emergency, the engineer is able to see all that is necessary, without leaving his post at the throttle.

TRUE FAVORITE OF FORTUNE

How Longshoreman of Naples Has Become Popular Hero With Little Effort of His Own.

Maciste is rapidly supplanting the other Italian film heroes in popular affection, says a Naples (Italy) dispatch. He was formerly a longshoreman on the docks here. One day a film operator, taking the departure of a ship with some heroes and heroines of a film drama registering "farewells," asked the boss Stevedore to help him in the action by hustling in some longshoremen. "I'll get Maciste for you," was the answer.

Maciste, famous about the port for his size, strength and good humor, registered action so well that he became a part of the movie company. Today there is not a corner in Italy where he is unknown to movie enthusiasts.

He is particularly popular with children who delight to see him use his giant's strength in annihilating some six or eight villains in a drama. His most popular film is that where he appears as an Alpine soldier, doing all kinds of dreadful things to Austrians.

WEALTH FROM ROCK SHALE

How Extraction of Oil Will Add Enormously to the Resources of the United States.

An interesting development, being watched by scientists, is in the extracting of oils and other products from rock shale. It will surprise many to know that the bureau of mines estimates that the exposed and known shale in Colorado and Utah will yield 36,000,000,000 gallons of oil—that is nearly 1,000,000,000 barrels.

In Scotland, where shale oil is produced on a commercial scale, for twenty-five years a dividend of from 8 to 20 per cent has been paid. In this country the shale rocks are found in the Dakotas, Wyoming, Montana, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico, besides those in the above states where the possible yield would be near 1,000,000,000 barrels.

Why Rat Is Farmer's Enemy.

The number of useful insect-eating birds nesting on the ground or in low bushes which fall victims to rats is extremely large and is one of the many kinds of injury done by these pernicious animals, which cannot be computed, writes E. W. Nelson in the National Geographic Magazine. Probably few frequenters of the countryside have returned to look into a bird's nest to observe its condition without many times finding it destroyed and fragments of egg shells lying about. Unquestionably a large percentage of such nests located in the neighborhood of buildings have been raided by rats.

On one of the small Danish islands it has been authentically recorded that the progeny of a single pair of rats, which escaped from captivity, in two years' time exterminated a great colony of birds for which the island had been noted.

Why Continuous Watering Benefits.

Lucien Daniel, a French botanist, has discovered that young hothouse plants and slips of vegetables, as well as flowers thrive far better by a system of continuous watering than by drenching the soil at stated periods. The new method depends upon the law of capillary attraction. Near each plant is placed a jar containing water, into which is dipped one end of a strip of linen or cotton, whose other end lies near the plant. With this uninterrupted supply of water, drop by drop, the plants thrived, greatly outdistancing other plants, which were submitted to an intermittent drenching.

FOR FRITZ'S SAKE

By MAUNA COWLES.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"It is perfectly outrageous for you to go on talking German," Mrs. Van Bergen told her daughter Freda, as they approached the hotel where the Van Bergens had their winter apartments. Freda raised two Teutonic eyes to her mother appealingly. "But Fritz cannot understand English," she said. "Can you, Fritzi, dear?" At which a very long short-legged dachshund, whose silky coat showed Freda's devoted care, wagged his tail and flapped his ears.

"Well, of course you will do as you choose—you always do," said Mrs. Van Bergen. "But I think you are taking risks. You are a perfect Gretchen type."

"But Van Bergen isn't German—it's Holland Dutch," insisted Freda. "And anyway, I'm sure I don't look like a spy."

"You can never tell," reiterated the mother. "Sometimes simple-looking people are shrewd enough, and it would be just like the Huns to make an accomplice of a simple little Gretchen—and that's what you look like."

The next morning, as she was taking her breakfast in the Van Bergen apartment, with the cherished Fritz sitting on a cushion in a chair at her side—for Freda breakfasted an hour or so before her parents—she glanced at the headline in a newspaper, emitted a little shriek of fright, and then began to fondle Fritz's soft long ears because she needed some encouragement. The article whose headlines she had read told of the taking of a girl as a spy, and of the suspicion entertained by the secret service men of three or four women accomplices. One of them, the account said, was a blonde young German girl of the perfect Gretchen type. Soon, however, Freda forgot her fright and she was light-hearted and joyous when she started forth from the hotel with Fritz.

When Freda returned her mother had gone out for a shopping tour and again her only companion was Fritz. He sat beside her as she practiced a Beethoven sonata on the piano. The telephone sounded and presently her mother's maid came to her to say that a Mr. Drew wished to speak to her. But as Freda had never heard of a Mr. Drew and did not wish to interrupt her practicing she asked the maid to take the message.

"He says he is very sorry, miss, to disturb you, but all he wants to know is whether or not you're a German."

Freda thought immediately of the headlines she had seen in the paper.

"I can't imagine why he wants to know," she said. "Will you please ask him who he is and what his business is."

The maid returned, saying that Mr. Drew realized that he had been abrupt, but he would call and explain himself at the apartment.

All Freda's fears returned and, gathering Fritz in her arms, she hurried to her room.

Presently the maid came to her room, bearing a card. Under the name of Mr. Drew there was the simple words, "National Detective Bureau," and the address of that concern.

"He says if he could please to see you, he would explain why he was intruding," the maid said.

Freda's round blue eyes were rounder and bluer than ever, and her heart had never before beaten so fast. "If I had only taken mother's advice," she whispered to Fritz in German. "Tell him I'm—I'm ill," she said to the maid. "And if he starts to search the apartment," she added with trembling voice, "why, you'll know I've gone down the fire escape."

Mr. Drew did not attempt to search the apartment, but he told the maid he was extremely sorry to have bothered Miss Van Bergen, and that he was surprised that she was ill, since he had seen her that morning.

Freda kept to her room the rest of the day. She did not want to go without dinner, for she was hungry. Besides, if she said she was ill she would be treated as an invalid, and this she detested. What she finally did was to slip away before dinner time, leaving word with her mother's maid that she had gone to dine with a chum and would be back right after dinner. The chum with whom she wished to dine was not at home, and what refreshments she did have that night she got at a French pastry shop.

When she came back, she found her mother and father, whom she had not seen before that day, and there was something in her mother's manner as she greeted her in the hall that told her that a guest was present, and that she should be on her best behavior.

The guest was Henry Drew. Her father had recently discovered him to be the son of one of his best friends. Everything in Freda's parents' manner showed supreme approval of the young man.

"I especially tried to get in touch with you this morning," Mr. Drew told Freda as soon as they could have a little tete-a-tete conversation. "It was awfully impertinent of me, but you see I'm working for my uncle—the one that has a detective business—and I'm on a shop-lifting case—trying to locate some stolen goods."

"Then you—you don't think I'm a spy?" she said. "And you don't think I'm that Gretchen girl with the dachshund they've been trying to find?"

"I think you are the most charming little girl in the world," said Mr. Drew.

Highly Cultured Indians.

It is manifest that in prehistoric times parts of Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico were inhabited by tribes of Indians representing a culture unlike any to be found elsewhere in North America. Their skill in agriculture and experness as builders of elaborate structures of dressed stone—such structures as existed nowhere else north of Mexico—would alone suffice to set them apart as a people wholly distinct.

W. S. S. SOCIETY AT HIGH SCHOOL

On Tuesday morning of this week Postmaster William C. DeWitt addressed the students and unfolded to them a plan whereby they might best serve their country at least financially. He proposed that they form a "War Savings' Stamp Society." The fee for which society would be one War Savings' Stamp. The school, as always, took decisive steps without delay. The students organized the society with the following officers: Prof. Lewis, chairman; Mr. Dunbar, vice-chairman; Miss Seigle, vice-chairman; Lloyd LeFevre, treasurer; Helen Wood, executive chairman.

Mr. DeWitt also impressed upon the students that it was their patriotic duty to attend the patriotic meeting to be held in the auditorium of the high school this evening, at which meeting Mr. Tully and other men of local prominence, will speak. It is hoped that the students will respond with their customary hearty co-operation with affairs pertaining to the welfare of our government.

The panel effects are obtained by combining the figure with the plain blackwood.

A SECOND IMPERATIVE TASK

A danger long since recognized by thoughtful observers is pointed out by Lord Robert Cecil England's Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs, when he says: "Of course it has proved futile to prophesy in this war but I believe that the German general plan is, supposing that they can not win a decisive victory over the Allies to go on fighting in the west until they have acquired complete commercial control over the east. If they once really establish themselves in Russia there is no reason why they should not fight the whole world forever." He might have added that their grip on Russia is stronger and more extended every day. Since they made "peace" with the foolish Bolsheviki they have continued advancing and grabbing as industriously as before.

Obviously there are two reasons why American haste to put forth great and ever greater strength is most urgent. We need to go quickly to the aid of the British and French who have lost heavily in man power since the great German drive began on March 21, for the Germans are hurrying to accomplish all they can before decisive American reinforcements arrive. And first, our first task, we need to accomplish quickly in order to give powerful aid in performing the scarcely less urgent task of frustrating the German plan of acquiring vast resources and impregnable power for years to come by extending the Teutonic grip throughout Russia. The Bolshevik leaders may deserve to feel the weight of the Kaiser's heel but the interests of all the Allies demand Russia's rescue.

DAMNING INDICTMENTS

To Irvin Cobb's account of Hun brutality to prisoners (from official reports) in the Saturday Evening Post for April 27 and C. Journelle's narrative of hideous atrocities in the current Atlantic Monthly has been added Elinor Glyn's pen-picture of the horrors of German occupation in northern France. The last mentioned chronicle is none the less convincing because, as would naturally be expected of the author of "Three Weeks," it frankly gives space to matters which a mere man would only dare to hint at or shrink from even mentioning. Mrs. Glyn tells of Prince Ditel Fritz's "pleasure house" for example and describes the despair of a wounded French gentleman whose wife aged 40 and daughters of 20 and 16 are all soon to give birth to offspring sired by German officers while they occupied his chateau, which was left a veritable ruin and dunghill as it was again included within the French lines. The Cobb-Journelle and Glyn accounts, taken together furnish a damning indictment, a picture of barbarous cruelty, bestiality and cannibalism for which the records of the worst savagery of past ages fail to offer a parallel. It is like being bespattered with filth to read a complete story of German atrocities, but nevertheless the good of the great cause demands that our eyes be fully opened.

CONSCRIPT SCOTT'S RAZOR

As Shenandoah, Pa., has a population of 28,000, it seems unaccountable that Conscript Henry Scott was the only one of its citizens called under the latest draft, but such is the case according to the account before us of the festivities in honor of its only and thus highly distinguished draftee, including a banquet, whereat it appears that the draftee was thus addressed by the District Attorney: "Henry you are done hearing coal for a while. You are going away to be a soldier. When you get over there shoot straight. Use well your ammunition. There are times when a country, even a great country like ours, runs out of ammunition. In such exigencies it will be your duty not only to carry in your hip pocket a razor but to flash it effectively."

Apparently this advice was superfluous, for Conscript Scott promptly confessed. "I always carries a razor and I she will have one handy when I gets to get up with them Germans." He made his intentions clear that if he didn't get them with a gun, he would do his best to "get 'em with a razor." After this convincing statement of preparedness Conscript Scott assured his fellow townsmen that he "sho would be proud and happy" to have his folks in old Virginia see him the center of attraction—or words to that effect—in the good democratic town of Shenandoah. Then he proudly marched to the station, escorted by the Lithuanian Brass Band and carrying his most favored weapon with him. The Prussian, however, big and confident, who encounters a black soldier in No Man's Land opposite the American lines would do well to decline a hand-to-hand tussle. An infuriated darkey plus a sharp razor is a combination liable to reduce the toughest of Huns to thin slices.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"Who breaks, pays." "That shows you don't know anything about being broke."—Baltimore American.

The Politician—"I see you farmers believe in putting good men in office." Farmer Cornstossel—"Yep. The best that money can buy."—Life.

"Think this winter will ever end?" "I see signs," said the rural editor. "A few timid poems on spring are beginning to seep in."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Why did he marry her at all if he intended getting a divorce so speedily?" "Because he didn't think it would be honorable to break the engagement."—Boston Transcript.

Husband—"I'm glad you only want five dollars to go shopping with today. What are you going to get with it?" Wife—"Nothing but luncheon, dear. I'm going to have everything else charged."—Judge.

A Day Will Come

Governor Whitman said at a dinner in Albany:

"The Allies are determined to fight on 'till militarism is destroyed. Germany is very arrogant now, but a day will come.

"Germany on that day will be a dead like the German who went fishing, and the Allies maybe, will be as unsympathetic as the Irishman on the dock.

"'I can't swim!'

"An Irishman sat with his eye on his float, and made no attempt at a rescue.

"The German sank a second time, came up and shouted again:

"'I can't swim!'

"The Irishman fished calmly on.

"A third time the German sank, and the third time he came up and roared:

"'I can't swim!'

"The Irishman as he took a chew of tobacco gave a laugh.

"'Well it's a bloomin' funny time to brag about it,' he said."—Exchange.

Long Ride Before Him

A cyclist who stopped at a village inn boasted about his abilities as a rider to such an extent that the landlord ventured to make a wager with him.

"Look here, muster," said the innkeeper, "you can't ride up and down this road 'till the church clock strikes six."

"Done," said the cyclist. "It's just close to 5 now," and, the next minute he was speeding down the road.

The cyclist shouted to one of the bystanders of whom many had assembled:

"I say, has the church clock struck six yet?"

"No you idiot," was the blunt reply. "Our church clock never strikes at all."—London Tit-Bits.

The Cheerful Steward

In the boat trip to Mexico the rough going produced that feeling among troopers which made it a matter of absolute indifference to them when the world came to an end, just so it came quick. On an army transport was a steward named Terry. Before the mess call sounded Terry always visited the different state rooms. Pushing the door ajar he could say to the officers:

"Gentlemen, do you wish me to throw your luncheon overboard or will you do it yourself?"—Pittsburgh Post.

Don't Be a Slackeress!

Women of the country, wake up! The time has come for you to act! Wherever you are, the government is in immediate need of your help!

Just as surely as the country requires at once the aid of all its intelligent able bodied young men, so it is in urgent need of the services of each and every woman. Furthermore, there is no age limit. Every female, from the little school-girl to the aged woman can and should help!

Three lines of work are open, one at least of which you should be able to do no matter who, where or what you are. Choose it now.

First: If you are incapacitated in other ways, you can at least learn to knit. The blind do this beautifully, and it is even recommended as quieting to the insane. Our millions of boys in the service will need plenty of socks, sweaters and wristlets next winter. Get busy now.

Second: If you stop to think of the awful carnage going on abroad every day, you will realize the pressing need of all the Red Cross bandages and surgical dressings we can possibly get ready, working night and day. Go to the nearest headquarters and take a course, so you can do this work in your spare moments. If your little town has no Red Cross unit, appeal to your nearest city, where arrangements can be made to get an instructor. Then do your part in your own comfortable home, to help the sick and suffering. Sew for the destitute women and children.

Third: You can produce food. Today we are in greater need than ever before in the history of our country. The whole world is looking to us for help. We simply can not fail those who have nowhere else to turn for the very necessities of life. Raise all you can for your own consumption, and thus lessen the demand on foreign growers. Don't waste time and space on lettuce, radishes and other such non-essentials. Put in the things that will count next winter—carrots, turnips, beets, potatoes and all the other vegetables that can easily be stored without canning. A few cents expended for seed now will produce many dollars' worth of fresh green stuff that possibly will keep you from hunger next winter. The U. S. Department of Agriculture will furnish free booklets on raising everything from a head of cabbage to a field of corn, and we should put every available foot of ground under cultivation at once.

Women and children make fine gardeners. Do your part by starting a garden immediately. Enthuse your neighbors. Help the country break its glorious record in world food production.

Here are but three of many lines of work. Choose one and then go to it.

Don't be a slackeress!—By Olive Hyde Foster of The Vigilantes.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, May 8.—At the last meeting of the Daughters of America they decided to take a fifty dollar Liberty Bond and so one can readily see that as a patriotic order they are willing to do whatever they can for the boys. It is not always the greatest noise and applause and many other trifles that win glory but often in silence and no display whatever obtains the desired effect.

Edgar Elmendorf of Beacon has spent a short time in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Decker had as week end guests their daughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bradshaw, of Ossining.

This Friday evening the Epworth League will hold a social and have League wil hold a social and have election of officers and jolly time at the conclusion of business.

Next in line of moving things for this place comes the Chautauqua movement, which reaches many places. Keep your purse filled, so you can open it very often for the several calls for money.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dwyer of New York city spent the week end at their summer home here. Alphonso Koons is up to date. He is going to have a fine concrete wall around his place and awnings put to his porch. He believes in taking some pleasure. We agree with him. You go this way only once; take pleasure while you can, and comfort goes hand in hand with pleasure, and yet with it all everyone does his or her bit for the boys who are in service.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Smedes have had guests from out of town.

Doretta Gedney returned Tuesday from a visit with the Bradshaws in Connecticut. She had a very pleasant time while there.

Mrs. John Graham was in Poughkeepsie on Tuesday.

The ladies of First M. E. Church of this place gave a reception in honor of Rev. F. A. Coon and family last Friday evening, May 3rd. The guests were received and entertained in the lecture room of the church. The attendance was large and in fact we think the largest on like occasions for a long time. This we heard was under the management and supervision of Mrs. R. H. Decker, president of the Auxiliary Club of said church and here her reputation as hostess was confirmed and her skill demonstrated by the manner in which she, with the other ladies of the society, made the occasion a complete success. During the evening a program was given: A. W. Lent, at the opening, gave words of welcome that were hearty, encouraging and sympathetic, with some humor in also and the pastor was assured of the hearty co-operation of the workers in the church by Mr. Lent's remarks. The pastor acknowledged the welcome most beautifully. That he and his wife will establish a deep relationship between pastor and people. No matter of what denomination they are fast winning by their genial ways, a place in the affections of the people of this place. Rev. G. H. Sconeld, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, was called upon and gave a few remarks and cordial greeting to the pastor and wife and hoped that all might work together. The church should safeguard, simplify and brighten social life; he brought in a few illustrations upon some subjects which were enjoyed by all. Mrs. E. A. Marsh gave one of her fine recitations and responded most graciously to an encore which every one present greatly appreciated. There were vocal selections by Mrs B. M. Whitley and Mrs. Kelsey Staples. Also chorus singing, which was very gratifying and fine instrumental selections by the Misses Grace and Pearl Scott and Miss Dorothy Churchill that gave untold pleasure. And J. W. Foster, E. A. Marsh, F. L. Metcalf and H. E. Wilcox were the quartet of talent, who gave very interesting remarks upon church work, Red Cross, finances, war, Sunday school, Liberty Bonds and telling of the work of women who are devoting themselves in doing for brave boys, fighting freedom's battles. Go where you may, the knitting needle is woman's weapon but let us stand by our churches and for our country, trusting in the Almighty power for peace. The remarks of these men were greatly appreciated and highly commented on. After digesting all this eloquence from beginning to close of program they were ready for digesting the sandwiches, cake and coffee prepared by the ladies for the inner man and later all left for their respective homes declaring the reception a social success.

Last Friday was Auxiliary Club day and it was an ideal one and the handsome residence of Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Decker on Vineyard avenue, was thrown open to the club members and a very large delegation availed themselves of the opportunity of attending. The hostess of the afternoon, Mrs Uriah Decker, and her two daughters, Mrs. Lloyd Plass and Miss Elizabeth Decker, spared no pains to make the meeting an enjoyable one for by their cordial greetings every member felt as if they were in their own home. The Rev. F. A. Coon, the new pastor, conducted the devotional exercises which were very much appreciated by every one present. At the close of those exercises the gavel, in the hands of the president, gave evidence that business would be taken up. Cordial greetings were extended to all by her and especially to the Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Conn, who were present for the first time. Since the last meeting this club has been very busy—they have put new carpets in some rooms in the parsonage; had a great deal of papering done and painting interior; new furniture and many little affairs attended to, which certainly add to the pleasure and comfort of the pastor and family. The reports of the various committees, were encouraging and all seemed interested in doing their "bit," for the church, for all realize what it means and every member fully realized that intelligent, well directed and continuous effort along any line of work will eventually bring reward. New committess were appointed for the month of May and many subjects thought over and suggestions given. Motions made and seconded in regard to future affairs. It seems this time is incomparably, the most critical and urgent the church have ever known, yet this band of women never lag or play the part of slackers. The social features add greatly to the pleasure of the members at each meeting. Refreshments are served, giving every one an opportunity while eating to visit with the people. At this meeting a substantial luncheon was served, consisting of potato salad, cucumber pickles, jelly, olives, several varieties of cake and coffee, and by the time all these good things were eaten, all declared they did not want the fourth meal until quite late. All gave expressions of pleasure to the hostess and hoping for many more such meetings as this one held at the Decker home on Vineyard avenue.

CLINTONDALE.

Clintondale, May 9.—Grange Hall presented a capacity house to greet the graded school on Friday evening when the anniversary entertainment was given, and those present spoke in highest praise of the creditable manner in which the program was rendered. The stage was effectively decorated with our country's flag, which was a proper setting for the patriotic character of the program. Music was furnished by Floyd McKinstry of Gardiner and Mrs. J. H. Heaton. Every number merited commendation from the first dialogue, "Raise a Pig" until the closing tableau, and the audience showed its appreciation by frequent and prolonged applause. The dialogues, "The Spelling Class" and "The Train to Mauro" were of a humorous character and were well done, also a dialogue called "The Boston Tea Party" was exceptionally well performed. Two small Italian girls sang a song in their native language which was heartily applauded. Harold Ackhart, always a favorite with an audience, sang "It's a Long Way to Berlin" and in answer to an encore sang "Daddy, I Want to Go." Clifton Ackhart and Harold Sutton carried the house into a wild state of enthusiasm by their singing and they were repeatedly encored and reluctantly allowed to leave the stage. The tableaux were exceedingly beatuiful and the two drills, the U. S. A. Drill by sixteen boys and the Patriotic Drill by twelve girls were both beautiful in effect and perfect in execution, showing much training and skill in their development. Much credit is due Principal George H. Shiels and the primary teacher, Miss Isadora Livingston, for the deep interest they have taken in the training of the pupils and the splendid results which their effort brought forth. These teachers deserve not only commendation for their good entertainment but also for the conscientious work they are doing each day in the school room in their endeavor to develop the intellect and character of the pupils entrusted to their care. The gross receipts were $55.89, the net proceeds of which is for the School Junior Red Cross.

Moses Teas has purchased a new horse.

Marshal Lowrie is expected to occupy his summer home at this place the coming season.

Homer York is still busy sawing wood for the people of this vicinity.

TEMPERANCE WOMEN IN ANNUAL SESSION

Institute Held in Kingston Wednesday Was Largely Attended and Very Interesting.

The annual institute of the Ulster County W. C. T. U. was held in St. James's M. E. Church on Wednesday.

Greetings from the city union were extended by Miss S. Alice Kiersted, while the Rev. T. H. Baragwanath, pastor of St. James's M. E. Church, extended the greetings of the church. Mrs. Mottie Conine of New Hurley responded.

Mrs. J. D. Rose of Highland conducted a W. C. T. U. Exchange in which matters affecting the county union were taken up and discussed.

The discussion as to what the union is doing to promote household thrift proved an interesting feature, and three minute talks answering that question were given by Mrs. Alice Crispell, Y. P. B. secretary; Mrs. Minnie Palmer, L. T. L. secretary; Mrs. J. Albert Palen, recording secretary, Ulster county; Mrs. E. A. Smiley, president of the Ellenville Union; Mrs. Sarah C. Pratt, president of Highland Union; Mrs. Mottie Conine, president of New Hurley Union; Mrs. Edward Young, president of Milton Union; and Miss Katherine W. Deyo, president of Wallkill Union.

Mrs. M. H. Bell gave a brief resume of the national convention and mid-year executive session at Albany, and the morning session closed with a prayer offered by Mrs. John Neander of Gardiner.

Misplaced Blessings.

The afternoon session of the institute opened with a prayer service led by Mrs. Edward Scofield of Highland. After the Scripture reading, Mrs. Scofield spoke of the merciful war relief work in which the W. C. T. U. was helping and made a request as the outgrowth of the following story, vouched for as authentic. A woman recently come to this country from France told of this incident related to her by a soldier from the front. On receipt of a pair of knitted socks from the states he promptly put them on and started in on a long march. Soon one foot began to hurt him and finally became so painful that he had to fall out of line and take off his shoes and socks. In the toe of the paining foot, he found a piece of paper rolled up, on opening proved to be a note from the knitter which said, "God bless your poor tired feet." It is needless to add that every knitter was asked to refrain from putting notes in the socks, but not from sending a personal word which is always appreciated.

Prayer was then offered by Mrs. Palmer of Cottekill. One of the most inspiring features of the afternoon was the recital of a flag poem, given by Master Conine, son of a former W. C. T. U. president. Master Conine had a voice that reached every corner of the room, a vivid imagination and a way of expressing the imagery in his own mind that drove home with irresistible force his every word. One would say that the lad was really dramatic if it had not all been far too much in earnest to have even the semblance of drama. So enthusiastic was the applause that the lad had to come back, and his recital of "Kaiser Bill's Dream," brought down the house, the applause being both loud and long. If half of our men fight with the same spirit that Master Conine recited, autocracy may well tremble on its throne.

Mrs. Abbott, formerly of Kingston and always an eager and efficient W. C. T. U. worker was then called to the platform and expressed the sincere joy it was to her to be with her former Kingston friends and coworkers again. She told of the loyalty of her own family to the cause of prohibition, her two sons and daughter as well as herself having been privileged to vote at the April election. She emphasized the value of the pledge work and called attention to the great progress made in the movement, and of the present fact that so many other organizations are now engaged in temperance work that the W. C. T. U. is not called upon for the aggressive activities of former days.

National Prohibition Resolution.

Apropos of the splendid recital given with so much spirit by the young son of Mrs Conine, and in the interest of the soldiers and sailors of our country, the following resolution was then offered from the floor, presented by Mrs. Edward Young and adopted:

Resolved that the W. C. T. U. of Ulster County now in session at Kingston N. Y. respectfully petition the honored bodies of the House of Representatives and Senate of the United States, to act at once in favor of National Prohibition as a war measure."

It was suggested that information to the effect that all present were of voting age in an enfranchised state be added.

Citizenship Forum.

The next subject on the program was announced as a "Forum on Citizenship," conducted by Mrs. L. M. De Silva, corresponding secretary of the State W. C. T. U., which proved to be full of interest. Mrs. De Silva herself is a woman of unusual charm, a delightful and convincing speaker to listen to and she knew her subject thoroughly.

Before opening the forum she offered to the audience a little primer of voting, and also a number of sheets of "The Busy Woman's Questionnaire." Both were almost immediately taken up by those present, there not being enough to go around. While deeply deploring this war itself wherein men become beasts, Mrs. De Silva still was assured that "God's in His Heaven, All's Well With His World." One good which she saw as coming out of this world conflict was the world-wide interest in prohibition. Whatever might be otherwise said of ex-Czar Nicholas, this would always redound to his lasting credit, that he liberated the 160,000,000 Russians from the slavery of alcohol. And all over the world reached by this war, the use of alcohol is being greatly curtailed, for it has been recognized that the efficient army is a sober army.

This war has further discovered the women of the country to the world as never before, according to Mrs. De Silva. Practically everything is today being asked of the women of the land except that they bear arms, and the women are promptly and efficiently granting all that is asked of them. Now, the women of the land ask only one thing of the government and that is their enfranchisement. Mrs. De Silva then went on to relate that incident in the life of Francis Willard, which as a little girl in her Illinois home, gave her her first vision of the power that the women of the land might be if given the right to vote. When she first spoke in favor, in fact urging woman's suffrage, Miss Willard was either scorned or labored with by her W. C. T. U. co-workers and friends. Mrs. De Silva then quoted a portion of the closing sentences of Miss Willard's famous "Home Protection Address," now so famous. And at last Miss Willard was recognized nationally for today in Statuary Hall, Washington, D. C., hers is the only bust of a woman in the hall.

Mrs. De Silva then told a highly amusing but pertinent story of a debate held where it was resolved, "That to a man on a back-woods farm a cow is of more value than a woman." In summing up the decision of the critics as to the debate, the judge said that his sympathies were with the woman but the money was on the cow. Whereupon a little woman in the rear of the hall rose and said with much spirit that she was supporting her husband and a family of children and the cow. She was told that her testimony could not be counted as she was not "one of the selected debaters." The speaker rejoiced that in 19 states, the women are now counted among the "selected debaters."

The grave responsibility that accompanies the privilege of voting was put before the women, and the speaker expressed her firm conviction that those cities that went wet at the last election did so because both the men and women who should have counted it a duty to do so failed to vote while all influenced by liquor traffic in any way did vote. She considered that in the matter of prohibition it was no longer a question of sex of the voter but of the Christian principles which they hold.

What Agnes Riddle Did.

Illustrating this point she told of Agnes Riddle, owner and personally operator of a big ranch in Colorado, mother of four sons, and member of the Colorado Legislature. It had been decided by the politicians to vote into being segregated vice district. Those in favor of the action did the usual lobbying but overlooked Agnes Riddle on the ground that she would not attend a session of the Legislature where such a question would be debated. They were mistaken. Agnes Riddle was there, and after listening to the arguments in favor of the movement, she rose and said that she would vote for the motion only in case they would also prepare a segregated district for fallen men as she could see no reason why the vicious men should go free and their poor victims be thus treated. So convincing was her arguments, not because she was a woman but because Christian principles backed her vote, that the only member of the legislature voting in favor of the bill was the man who introduced the same.

Again, Mrs. De Silva called attention to the incident with regard to the "Legion of Death" in the Russian Army. Fear had been expressed for the safety of the women of the Legion, as they were encamped next to a body of men, many of whom were indeed vicious. Sure enough, one night there came a call from one of the men, demanding admittance. The sentry asked him what he wanted. He boldly said he wanted to come in where the girls were. The answer was hurled back, "There are no girls here, only soldiers." Mrs. De Silva also showed that the theory that voting would make women different had been exploded except that it gave a power to the woman of character not before possessed.

Woman's Questionnaire.

Mrs. De Silva then took up the "Busy Woman's Questionnaire" which contained 20 pertinent questions relative to the vote in the hands of women, and questions from the floor added to the interest of this part of the forum. During this forum there were two or three highly amusing tilts between the women and the Rev. Mr. Chase, and other men in the audience, showing that even the men in favor of suffrage are not yet accustomed to the same as an established fact.

Mrs. DeSilva's able address was followed by a violin solo, "Traumerei,' played by Miss Jane Hogeboom, with Miss Myers at the piano. The number was generously applauded.

Another very interesting feature of the program was "Snap Shots from the State Convention," held at Jamestown, given in a concise, entertaining and vivid manner by Mrs. J. D. Rose, who heartily thanked the Union for giving her the privilege of attending such an inspiring convention. The report of the resolutions committee was next read by Miss Reynolds, wherein the Union went on record as backing government at every possible point but seriously objected to the fearful waste at this time of sugar, grain and coal in the continued manufacture of beer in this country. A resolution of thanks to the local Union, Miss S. Alice Kiersted, president, and to the officers and members of St. James M. E. Church was included in this report.

Institute Attendance.

It was announced that the present Institute was one of the largest ever held here in that there were 62 delegates present; 31 visitors, 6 officers, 9 superintendents, neither presidents nor delegates.

Just before the meeting was brought to a close, a brief newspaper article was read, which would offer to the W. C. T. U. or any other prohibition forces in the land the biggest lever with which to pry into place their objective that has as yet been forged. It was this statement, "We fight a dry Germany. Not a drop of beer is being manufactured in Germany today."

It seemed a prophetic and striking announcement with which to close the Institute.

FREE DISPENSARY SOON TO OPEN HERE

Tuberculosis Dispensary Now Assured—Will Be Centrally Located—Some Furnishings Are Needed.

The Committee on a special Tuberculosis Dispensary in this city, appointed with power by the executive council of the Ulster County Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis, has reported to the Freeman that the dispensary is now an assured fact, and that it will be open to patients in the very near future. The exact date will be announced as soon as decided upon.

The dispensary will be opened at 578 Broadway, in the building recently occupied by Netburn the tailor, and almost directly opposite the Red Cross headquarters. There will be four rooms; an office, an undressing room; an examining room and a dressing room. Dr. Bongartz will be in charge of the hours that the Dispensary will be open each week, and will be assisted as necessary by Drs. O'Meara and Gates, the members of the committee having the matter in charge, with the visiting tuberculosis nurse assisting.

In addition to those cases which the visiting nurse will recommend to visit the dispensary, persons who suspect that they may have tuberculosis in any form are urged to go to the dispensary, which will be free, and where, since only tubercular cases are to be considered, expert information as to their condition will be given them. Wherever it is found that there is sufficient ground for suspicion to require the care or treatment of the patient by a physician, the patient will be referred to his or her own physician. If the patient has no physician, follow up care of the best sort will be arranged for at the dispensary.

Realizing the deep interest which the people of this community always take in any movement to fight consumption or tuberculosis in any form, the committee is venturing to ask for a little assistance in this work, which will save the expenditure of actual money. There will be needed for the dispensary, a good desk that can be locked; substantial chairs or benches; a reliable scales—just ordinary scales whereon a person can be accurately weighed being all that is needed. Any person having any of the above mentioned articles which they could contribute or desiring to give money to go toward the purchase of such supplies is asked to communicate at once with Dr. Mark O'Meara, chairman of the committee, telephone 1174.

Throughout the entire state there has been, this spring, under the State Charities' Aid, a strong movement to establish such dispensaries, especially in view of the war-time increase in tuberculosis from various causes. This dispensary should be the spot to which any men in the city rejected in the draft because of tuberculosis or the suspicion of the same should go at once, in order that prompt action may prove a life saver.

The establishment of this dispensary will bring Kingston into the list of cities in the state which now have such means of fighting the great white plague. On April 15th there were 33 cities not yet so supplied, and Kingston's enrollment will reduce that number by one at least.

Persons who are perfectly well themselves, but have suspicions about some neighbor, acquaintance or friend, should do their utmost to persuade them to go to the dispensary to make sure about the matter. By doing this they may be saving human life.

DESTROY MORE AEROPLANES.

British Report 17 More Shot Down on Italian Front.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, May 9.—Seventeen additional Austro-German aeroplanes have been shot down on the Italian front, the British war office reported today in a statement dealing with operations in that theater of war. The text of the announcement follows:

"Two successful raids were carried out and we captured a few prisoners. The artillery is more active. Hostile batteries were engaged with satisfactory results. Our air forces, since the last report, have destroyed seventeen enemy aeroplanes. None of ours was lost."

WALLKILL.

Wallkill, May 9.—The Third Liberty Loan drive ended on Saturday in Wallkill with great satisfaction to the proud patriotic citizens of the town of Shawangunk. $50,000 was subscribed; $20,000 was the allotment. The committee worked hard and as an appreciation of the loyalty of the towns people, the members of the men's and women's committee will donate to the town a U. S. flag to fly from an iron pole, which will be set in concrete in the park, a gift from Mrs. George Halliday. Below the U. S. flag will flow the Third Liberty Loan committee flag, with its proud star for doubling the subscription. When the above flags will be unfurled appropriate services will be held to which everyone, far and near, will be welcome. The Liberty parade held in Wallkill on Liberty Day was the largest ever held in this vicinity and reflected much credit to the entire community, who helped maked it a pronounced success. $100 was realized for the Local Red Cross as a result of Red Cross girls collecting money in streets.

The minstrel showed, under the direction of Robert Yeaple, held three consecutive nights last week for a Home Red Cross benefit, was largely attended. All honor is due to the boys who worked so hard to add $100 to the Red Cross work for their fellowmen in camps and across the seas.

Mothers' Day will be celebrated in the Reformed Church Sunday morning. Anyone wishing carnations can procure them of Miss Ada Lipsett.

GOVERNOR SETS STIELOW FREE

Will Follow Same Procedure With Stielow's Brother-in-law, Both Convicted of Murder—State-Wide Interest in Case.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, May 9.—After spending nearly 3 years in Sing Sing prison and facing the electric chair several times, Charles F. Stielow will walk out of prison a free man within a day or two, freed of the charge of a double murder. Stielow was pardoned last night by Governor Whitman, following an investigation conducted by George A. Bond of Syracuse, special deputy attorney general. The governor ordered the commutation papers prepared today. They will be immediately sent to prison authorities and Stielow will be released.

The same procedure will be followed with Nelson I. Green, Stielow's brother-in-law, who was convicted of murder, second degree, in connection with the same crime.

Plans are already being made for the prosecution of Clarence F. O'Connell and Erwin King, peddlers, now charged with the crime of killing Charles B. Phelps, 70 years old, and his housekeeper, Margaret Wolcott, 50, West Shelby, N. Y., in March, 1915, the crime of which Stielow nearly paid for with his life.

The Stielow case has been one of the most perplexing in the criminal annals of the state. His conviction of murder in the first degree was affirmed by the court of appeals.

Three applications for new trials were denied and his life was only saved by frequent respites granted by the governor following a confession made by King that he had committed the murders, despite that King later repudiated his confession. In December last, however, King made another confession charging O'Connell with the crime and admitting having aided in it himself.

O'Connell and King are now in prison.

Gave Hat For Red Cross.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Macon, Mo., May 9.—"Folks, I haven't got very much—I haven't got any money, but I'll do what I can," declared Frank Long, a farmer, at a Red Cross auction sale at Rogers school house near here. "How much am I offered for this hat?" he asked, as he lifted his hat in his hand above his head.

The crowd laughed.

Then some one said "ten cents." Some one else doubled the bid, and the hat was knocked down for $2.50. The sale brought $65. Mr. Long went home bareheaded and happy.

BOY SCOUTS AGAIN RESPOND FOR DUTY

Another opportunity for the Boy Scouts to serve the community has been given by Postmaster DeWitt in his request that the Scouts act as ushers at the mass meeting for the promotion of the sale of war stamps to be held at the high school this evening.

The Boy Scouts have been in the campaign for the sale of the W. S. S. for several weeks but owing to their work in the Liberty Loan, thrift stamp sales have taken a slump. Scouts should attend this meeting not alone for the purpose of ushering but that they may get an inspiration to renew their efforts to help win the war.

Scouts are requestd to report at the high school at 7:15, when they will be assigned to duty as ushers and orderlies.

The Girl Scouts have been invited to attend in a body and seats will be reserved for them.

The following communication has been received at Scout headquarters:

Kingston, May 8, 1918.

To the Boy Scouts of Kingston and the Girl Scouts of Kingston.

The Sons of Vet. Aux. No. 53, of Tappen Camp, No. 1, wish to extend an invitation to you to be their guests at Mother's Day services at the Clinton Ave. Methodist Church Sunday evening, May 12th.

(Signed) EMMA E. DE GRAFF, Secretary.

This invitation is greatly appreciated by both organizations and many Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts will attend the service.

Owing to the fact that the Scout organization is made up of members of the Catholic, Jewish and Protestant faiths and the ruling in our national constitution concerning nonsectarianism, it is impossible to accept this invitation officially or to issue an order for Scouts to attend, but it is hoped that Scouts who can, will attend.

The sending to enemy countries through the Red Cross of messages other than as above indicated, except prisoners of war mail, is forbidden by law, and will render the persons attempting to send them liable to prosecution.

BANQUET FOR RICHTER.

Farewell Affair For National Army Conscript Who Leaves Saturday.

A number of the friends of Harry Richter tendered him a banquet at Marz Hotel on Tuesday evening, May 7th. "Rick," as he is better known among his many friends, leaves Saturday in the draft contingent and carries with him the best wishes of his host of friends. The banqueting table was handsomely and artistically decorated for the occasion with flowers and each guest wore a carnation. One the finest menus ever served at this place was served to the eighteen guests who sat down to the table after the toast given by Mr. Waimsley to Mr. Richter. After and during the meal a number of appropriate addresses were made by many of the guests, each and every one wishing Mr. Richter the best of success. Among those present were: The Misses Kathryn Ketterer, Peggy Webster, Billie Oakley, Georgiana Whitaker, Martha Wingert, Mary Oakley, Hazel Van DeBogart, Mrs. Julia Davenport, Mrs. Jacob Goedtel, the honored guest, Harry Richter, George F. Dingee, A. J. Keator, Edward Wortman, Edwin Cusack, Claude Kieffer, Lucullus Dunn, Russell Walmsley and Jacob Goedtel.

West Shokan Baptist Church Notes.

The Rev. J. R. Vaughn of Phoenicia will preach in the West Shokan Baptist Church every Sunday at 3 p. m. Prayer meeting every week Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock. The Sunday school time has been changed from in the morning to 2 p. m., one hour before church service.

Stay Slender.

Body fat is stored-up energy. Keep your energy in circulation—not in storage. Don't be afraid of potatoes. Eat plenty of them. Use up the energy they give you for your war work and stay slender.

Eat well, work hard, be patriotic.

Write the United States Department of Agriculture for new potato recipes.

Law of Averages.

Some railroad official engaged in winning the war for democracy has figured it out that, after you have traveled 16,000,000 miles, your turn to be killed in an accident is at hand. That settles it. When a speedometer registers 15,000,000 miles, we are going to travel the rest of the way afoot.

TOURIST STRAW HAT

This tourist hat is of lizard-green straw. It has a high crown, narrow brim, and rather effective wings on each side.

HOW TO KEEP UP THE STRAPS

Tiny Gold Safety Pin, Covered Over by Sewed-On Pink Rose, Found to Be Satisfactory.

An appearance that might otherwise be the pink of perfection for a woman is often very much marred by the straps of her underwear, which slip, each a different way, from her shoulders and show through the thin blouse. The only solution to this state of affairs when one affects the strap kind of lingerie is some sort of lingerie clasps. Of course, the little gold ones are very fetching, but there are some which can be made almost in a jiffy, and make attractive gifts and favors at parties where girls foregather.

One girl specializes on tiny gold safety pins, sewing atop of them to hide the pin one of those small pink roses which can be bought by the yard. Roses rolled from pink ribbon would answer just as well.

Another girl embroiders hers; using linen or a heavy ribbon, half an inch wide, and buttonholes the edges. Then she sews snaps on them, half on each end, and they are ready to clasp over any number of truant straps. A circle of French knots covers the sewing from the snaps.

Ribbons with a bow on one end, provided with snaps, will do the work efficiently and artisrically, too.

The crocheter will find it easy to make these little clasps, finishing off the narrow band with a small crocheted rose or shamrock.

NEWER BLOUSES ARE CLOSED

Garments So Arranged That the Deep Collar at the Back Need Not Be Disturbed.

The new blouses are closed in a number of fashions and many of them are ingeniously contrived so that the deep collar at the back need not be disturbed. One model is made with a shaped opening at the front so that it slips over the head—if the head is not too large. This blouse, therefore, has no visible means of closing—or opening. And it is very pretty and the full front falls in unbroken folds and the deep collar of the back is uninterrupted.

And if one puts this blouse on carefully, pulling it smoothly over the hair, it is all very well.

A newer method of getting around the difficulty of the deep collar in the back or the collar across the back, which marks so many of the new blouses, and the desire for the unbroken front, is to slit up the back from the waistline for a few inches—say five or six.

The matter of pulling the blouse over the head is then much simplified, and the results gained are about the same. Moreover, the little buttoned opening at the bottom of the back of the blouse, is, if anything, of decorative value.

OUR FRILLS AND FURBELOWS

Items of Fashion That Should Be of Especial Interest to Women Seeking Latest in Styles.

Gray and yellow make a pretty combination.

Small poke-shaped hats are in evidence.

Satin is used for dresses, suits and hats.

Kilted plaids are much in favor for skirts.

Wool embroideries are more than ever used.

There must be a note of contrast in the dress.

Flag blue is combined with gray and chamois.

Sashes are tied at one side, under the left arm.

The slip-on coat is one that Paris is very fond of.

Wool hophacking is to be used for motor wraps.

White silk is promised for spring suits and dresses.

The corset which laces in back is growing in favor.

The straight Japanese sleeve is one much favored.

Knife Plaitings Good.

Knife plaitings are a very popular trimming, for sheer summer frocks. They are especially adapted to organdies or any striped materials that require little other trimming. These plaitings are also good when used to edge the surplice fronts of a dress that tie in the back in a big bow.

HOW PHYSICIANS CAN LOCATE SEAT OF PAIN IN THE HUMAN BODY.

—I asked an ex-surgeon of the United States army this question: "Now, suppose a man comes before you and says he is in pain, how can you tell if he is in pain or not?" His reply was: "You can't tell; you have got to take his word for it."

I have discovered this fact, that when there is pain in any part of the body there will be a tension of pulse and contraction of the pupil of the eye, reports Dr. Eli G. Jones. If there is no tension of the pulse and no contraction of the pupil of the eye there is no pain.

I have also discovered that there is a great difference between the pulse of the right and left arm. The pulse of one arm will tell us of the vitality, the constitution of the sick person; the pulse of the other arm will tell us of the local trouble, whatever it may be, also the real, true condition of the patient. When the pulses of both wrists are alike, full, strong and regular, the patient is nearly well.

Some of the most prominent physicians in the country are testing this discovery in their practice, for it is one of the most important yet made in this century.

EXPLAINING SHORTAGE OF ICE

Why Summer May Be a Period of Shortage and Tribulation to the Average Housekeeper.

Next summer may see a bad shortage of ice. Scarcity of labor has been interfering with the cutting of river and lake ice this season, and hampered by shortages of the chief products necessary for ice manufacture—coal and ammonia.

Some time ago the government called a conference of the ice manufacturers and asked them to economize in their use of coal. One of the suggestions was that some of the plants shut down and buy their ice for storage purposes from those in working order at cost price. It costs but a little bit more to turn out 100 tons of ice than it costs to turn out 50. That is, once a plant is set going it can, with very little more labor and power, turn out a largely increased product. So, of course, a ton of ice made in a factory that turns out 100 tons a day is much cheaper than a ton made in one where 50 tons is the daily output. It was a good business proposition, then, for the ice manufacturers to pool their ammonia and set the bigger plants going at highest capacity, and the government caused the saving of a considerable amount of coal.

TOWN NAMED FROM POT HOLE

How Important Industrial City of the East Got Appellation Which Has No Mate in History.

Canajoharie, N. Y. (the only town of the name in the world), derives its Indian name, meaning "The Pot that Washes Itself," from a large pot hole in the bed of the Canajoharie creek.

This natural curiosity is a hole about fifteen feet in diameter worn in the solid limestone bed of the creek by the action of the water, says Boy's Life, the Boy Scouts' magazine. In the days of the Indians it was supposed to be bottomless, but as the years have rolled on landslides have filled it to within about ten feet of the surface.

The pot hole is situated at the mouth of a gorge cut through the slate and limestone rocks. About a mile above is a beautiful fall fifty feet in height, at the top of which is a sulphur spring which the Mohawks used for medicinal purposes.

Why Hen Likes or Dislikes You.

"Hens are funny sorts of creatures," observes a poultry fancier. "They have their likes and dislikes—especially dislikes. If you move a hen she turns crusty, and won't lay eggs. She likes her old home, and takes an abominable time to get used to the new.

"If you wave a cloth within sight of the occupants of your fowl run, you will hear a shocking row. This particular noise is known as the 'danger signal,' and sometimes will be indulged in without a single break for as long as twenty minutes.

"If you take it into your head to rearrange the nest boxes, depend upon it Biddy will pay you out. She will miss that day with her usual egg.

"Provided they are good, it's wisest to stick to old things in poultry keeping, and not to shift them unless you are compelled to do so. At least, there's one thing you can change and that's the fodder. Hens won't object to that at all; in fact, they like it."

THE CABIN

By NEWTON LAWRENCE.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Old Wilder's cutting timber on the ledge," the big voice of Doctor Frost boomed from the hallway, and the tread of his great lumberman's boots shook the frail New Hampshire farmhouse.

Carroll Larue, wrapped in a patchwork quilt, in an armchair by the window, did not look up when he entered, or answer his cheery: "How's the little patient this cold morning?" His bit of gossip about old Wilder cutting timber, had brought two dull red patches into her pale cheeks, and she feared to meet the doctor's kindly, piercing eyes. "Could it be," she asked herself, "that he knew—that he knew how she and Jim had planned to build their house among the pines on that ledge, when Jim got his patents—and sold them?"

So she stared at the glass of potash and water, covered with a saucer, on the window sill, and her mother answered for her: "She's just the same, doctor. Gargles her throat with potash, and takes the tonic you left for her. But she doesn't take any interest. Are you sure, doctor, that it's not—that it isn't—?"

"Consumption! Bah!" snorted the doctor. "There's just one thing more than this influenza that's the matter with her, and that's—. Well, it's psychological. Not a case for a pathologist at all," and he pulled up a chair beside her.

From the corners of her eyes, Carroll saw his huge bulk in its shaggy fur coat settled into the chair. The coat and his beard were frosty, where his breath had condensed and frozen.

"Here you are, young lady," he announced, brusquely, and slipped a thermometer between her lips. "Smoke that for a while, and listen to me.

"You and Jim Langley were both born on Christmas day twenty-two years ago. And I've known you both just that long. There isn't a likelier girl than you in Claremont county; but Jim, well, he's a no'er-do-well, a dreamer. He lost his job at the electric company for wasting the company's time on his fool inventions and such. You know more about that than I do, because you worked in Mr. Thompson's office and earned more money, I'll bet, than he did in the shop.

"But now, because Jim's gone off to the city on a wild-goose chase, most likely, there's no use losing your grip on yourself, little girl, and moping."

The girl said nothing, but shook her head slowly, and looked out across the snow-covered fields toward the dark fringe of pines on Wilder's ledge.

Later she watched the doctor's cutter disappear down the road. Then she crossed the room to a writing desk, and took out a letter—Jim's last.

It was written in New York, and there was the picture of a hotel on the envelope. It began:

"Dearest Carroll: They won't take any interest in my invention. And I'm almost discouraged. I can't manage to see anyone in the big electric companies who has authority to buy my direct-current converter, if they wanted it. They all say, 'we'll investigate, and let you know, Mr. Langley.'

"It's six weeks now, but I'll stay until the converter's marketed, if it's forever. What's the use coming back before? I couldn't get a job paying enough for us both to live on—even if we didn't build the cabin on Wilder's ledge by the lake. And I simply won't have you working for that Thompson after we're married."

If Jim could only understand, she thought, looking up from the letter, that it was he with his dreams and fancies, his imagination that she wanted. What if they did call him a no'er-do-well? What if he was? She wanted him.

What if some of his dreams didn't come true? They couldn't all come true. And so, with a little sigh she turned back to the letter.

"D'y know," it went on, "that it's only the thought of you, and our cabin on the rocks above the lake with the little workshop behind, that gives me any courage at all. Well it surely does; and it's the only thing, sometimes, when I come in feeling downhearted and blue, that makes me put out the gas in the usual way."

She laid down the letter, and again looked out toward Wilder's ledge where they were cutting. It was an irridescent day, and the snow glittered blue-white in the sunshine. The jagged rocks of the ledge showed deep purple above the white fields, zigzagged by dark rail fences.

Even as she looked, one of the great pines on the top of the ledge seemed to topple and disappear.

"So that's the end of another dream," she thought, with a choking sensation in her throat. And she reached for her handkerchief.

There was a hollow crunch of footsteps on the front porch. The front door banged, her own burst open. And there stood Jim.

In the instant before he dashed across the room and caught her up, she noticed his new fur coat and city-cut clothes.

"I sold the patents," he shouted, "to Westinghouse. Six thousand and royalties," he added, jubilantly.

An hour later, her eyes shining, too, her face moist, and her breath a little choky, she said: "Jim, dear, they're cutting off the timber on Wilder's ledge."

"Yes," said Jim, "to build our cabin. It's Langley's ledge, now, dear. Here's the deed."

Why He Eats But One Meal A Day.

The man who thinks he is living the simple life on three Hooverized meals a day ought to know C. B. Woodhead, a rancher of Los Angeles county, Cal. Woodhead has been living on one meal a day for fifty years. He is seventy-two years old and is a veteran of the Civil war. He started his one meal a day program soon after the Civil war and has kept to it. "I eat my one meal," he says, "at night just before bedtime, when a man gets his digestion up to normal, and he can eat and sleep like any other animal. I eat no more than any other person at a meal. I feel very fit and expect to live many more years. I don't smoke and I don't drink."

Powerful Exterminator.

In India and Australia a rat and rabbit exterminator was tested some time ago. It consists of an outer and inner metal shell, like one small egg in a larger one. In the outer shell is sulphuric acid. In the inner metal egg is dry cyanide of potash. The outer shell is filled with acid and placed in the rat hole or burrow, and all rat holes are tightly sealed. After an hour or so the acid eats into the cyanide and turns loose a lot of deadly prussic acid gas.

Convenient Wrist Watch.

"I can't understand why the public make such a joke of the wrist watch," said the knut to the hardened sinner. "I'm sure it's a great convenience."

"Yes. With the old kind of watch I always had to unbutton my coat and fish in every one of my waistcoat pockets for it. Now I have to unbutton my coat, fish in every one of my waistcoat pockets, discover that the watch isn't there, push up my sleeve, and look at it. A great convenience!"

PROCEEDINGS IN SUPREME COURT

Justice Howard Dismisses Damage Action—Prove Will of Isaac Davis—Judgment for Plaintiff in Case 95—Automobile Accident Case No. On.

An action for damages brought by Teresa Sisco against Earl C. Beardslee and Hattie M. Beardslee was begun in the supreme court Wednesday afternoon before Judge Howard and a jury. The plaintiff alleges that on the afternoon of July 15, 1917, she was riding on the Kingston-Saugerties state road in an automobile and as the guest of John Sisco, at the rate of ten or fifteen miles an hour, when the defendants car which was going in the same direction at a rate of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour, attempted to pass between a wagon and the car in which plaintiff was riding, but that they were negligent and careless in doing this, which resulted in the car in which the plaintiff was riding being overturned, and plaintiff and other occupants were thrown out.

The plaintiff claims that she sustained injuries to the left arm and shoulder, bruises on left sde, gash on left limb and bruises about the limbs and body, and asks for $1,000 damages.

The defendants, through their attorney, Judge Willim D. Brinnier, Jr., make a general denial of the charges of negligence and carelessness. The plaintiff is represented by Andrew J. Cook.

The case of the plaintiff rested Wednesday afternoon and the defendant's case was started this morning. Michael DeCicco of East Kingston, justice of the peace, who was also riding in the Sisco car the day of the accident, brought suit against the Beardslees. The action was tried at the March term of the supreme court before Justice Rudd and a jury. The jury returned a verdict of $5 for the plaintiff. The testimony at this triad was similar to that at the other trial, with practically the same witnesses.

Grants Motion to Dismiss Action.

In Case No. 66, an acton for damages brought by Fred W. Phillips and Norman A. Brown against Grace V. Merritt and Charles H. Merritt, Judge Howard granted the motion made by Arthur C. Connelly, attorney for the defendants, for a dismissal of the action, upon the grounds that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that there was any misrepresentation upon the part of the defendants. The motion was made at the close of the plaintiff's case Wednesday afternoon. Joseph M. Fowler also appeared for the defendants. Plaintiffs were represented by Judge John G. Van Etten and Andrew J. Cook. Plaintiffs claimed that last spring they bought from the defendants, for $3,100, a lot on Clinton avenue, nearly opposite the Senate House, for the purpose of erecting a garage. Plaintiffs alleged that the defendants represented the ground as being solid and firm, but that when they prepared to lay the foundations they found the soil contained quicksand. They sued for the purchase price and to have the lot transferred back to defendants.

Inquest This Morning.

An inquest was taken this morning in Case No. 95, William Redmond against A. E. Rose, to recover on a note. Judge Howard awarded judgment to the plaintiff for $320 and costs. Plaintiff was represented by William D. Brinnier, Sr. There was no appearance for the defense.

Prove Will of Isaac Davis.

The will of Isaac Davis, who died at Kingston January 7, 1918, was declared valid by the jury; the court ordering a verdict to that effect. It was expected that there would be a contest over the will, but the contestants changed their minds. Proponents were represented by William D. Brinnier, Sr. George H. Sherman and George Card of Poughkeepsie were the only witnesses called. They witnessed the drawing up of the will, and testified that the testator was of sound mind at the time.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 9.—Low priced railway stocks were in demand from several sources at the opening of the stock market today. New Haven responded to concentrated buying with an advance of 2¼ points to 34½. Missouri Pacific rose ¾ to 23. Erie First Preferred ⅝ to 21, and Southern Railway 1¼ to 23½. Steel Industrials were heavy with Steel Common opening down ¾ at 102¼, but a substantial demand appeared causing a quick rally to 102⅞. Baldwin Locomotive dropped ¾ to 81⅛. The Bethlehem Steel B lost ½ to 83½.

Marine Preferred was strong at the opening, advancing ¾ to 92⅛ with a reaction to 91¼ but later an upturn carried the price back to 91¾. American Sugar made a gain of 2 points to 109 and American Beet Sugar rose one point to 74½. At the end of the first half hour, the market tone showed pronounced strength with advances in order all through the list.

Liberty 4's sold at 95.84, while the 3½'s were traded in at 98.90.

The active trading in the railroad issues during the first half hour was followed by declines in nearly all the active industrials on a large scale. Steel Common dropped one point to 102. The railroad issues lost some of their early gains, New Haven reacting over one point to 33⅜, while Reading dropped from 87 to 85⅞.

The upward movement in Steel Common which started early in the afternoon, carried the price of that stock to 106⅞, a gain of 4⅞ from the low of the day and a new high record for the year. The other steel industrials moved in sympathy with gains of from 1 to 3 points. Baldwin advanced from 81½ to 84, and Bethlehem Steel B was up to 86. Reading moved up to 87½ and Union Pacific to 123.

The stock market closed strong today; government bounds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

IMPORTANCE OF WAGON ROAD

One Drawback to Fall of Rain Is That Roads Are Made Impassable for Several Days.

But for one fact, all of us could rejoice in this rain, meaning as much as it does to the growing crops. The one drawback is the unfortunate fact that the rain will make the roads almost impassable for several days. But the rain is not to blame for this state of affairs. We are. We ought to have roads on which the only effect of rain would be to wash them clean—just as it does with the city pavements. And it's not for the joy-riders alone that we need such roads, says Wichita Eagle. If we had good roads, farmers, who can't work in their fields after a rain, could do their hauling on such days. Now the rain that prevents working the fields prevents hauling to market, except light loads, and at a prohibitive cost. The wagon haul of agricultural products is infinitesimal in distance, as compared with the rail and water haul, yet it costs actually more, according to government statistics. For the benefit of the farmer we need good roads.

MAINTAIN ROADS WITH DRAG

No Better or Cheaper Way of Keeping Highways in Good Order Than by Using Implement.

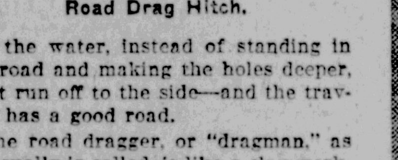
Road dragging is so simple an undertaking, providing the road to be dragged is first graded, drained and shaped properly, that a summary of its benefits cannot be presented too often, writes George B. Harrison in Farmers Mail and Breeze. Anyone can make a drag and even a boy can keep a piece of road in good shape with the proper instruction at the beginning. A 10-inch or 12-inch log between 8 and 9 feet long or two 3 by 12 planks with 2 by 6 reinforcing strips of the same length, four cross sticks, a chain, boards for the platform and a metal wearing strip are certainly procurable anywhere.

The theory in road dragging which has proved practicable for road improvement is to smooth and shape up the puddled earth of a road to fill the ruts and holes and force the water off the roadway. "Puddled" earth on a road is the wet earth which has been worked up by traffic so that it is dense and when compacted will not let the water seep away. If this compacting is done without any direction ruts and holes appear and hold the water and make a bad road. But if the puddled earth be spread smoothly over the surface of the road with somewhat of a rounded effect it dries firm and hard, and the water, instead of standing in the road and making the holes deeper, must run off to the side—and the traveler has a good road.



Road Drag Hitch.

The road dragger, or "dragman," as he usually is called, is like a clay worker when he shapes up the puddled earth and smooths the road. He puts the surface in condition and gets the standing water off, and the roadbed dries in that condition instead of holding the water and letting the traffic work the ruts deeper. The dragman could not shape this up with dust any more than the clay worker could fashion his image with dry dirt. But if he gets out right after a rain, while the earth is puddled, he can work his road and the traffic will help him, for the water will be forced out and off the surface. That is why it is so important to drag when the roads are not too dry to puddle or compact. Perhaps the traffic is sufficient to cut up the road after it is dragged, and this discourages the man who does the dragging. But in that case he should follow over the road and do it again if necessary and win the fight for a good road. If he waits until the road is dry because the vehicles rut up his dragged road he will simply plane off the surface and not remove the trouble. If he drags a second or perhaps a third time he will work toward a hard surface, impervious to water and with a minimum of dust, which is the evidence of a well-dragged highway. Perhaps, if the vehicles cut a road when it is first being dragged, the drivers may be persuaded to drive by the side, if that is feasible, while the road is first drying out or freezing.

Follow the Good Road.

Follow the good road and it will lead to a good town and by many a good farm.

Dragging Public Roads.

It is not difficult to prove that dragging the public roads regularly at the proper time probably is the most economical method of highway improvement.

Road Dragging Is Ahead.

Even at maximum costs road dragging is ahead of other maintenance both as to results and for economy.

Use Full Width of Road.

Get the traffic to use the full width of the roadway.

BASEBALL MAGNATE NOW SERVING IN FRANCE WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES

This is the first photograph of Capt. T. L. Huston, part owner with Col. Jacob Ruppert, of the New York American league baseball club, who is serving as a captain of engineers with the American expeditionary forces in France. Some of the engineers are now reported fighting with the British against the German drive. Whether or not Captain Huston is with them is not known.

Though busy with his duties of war he finds time occasionally to think of baseball. Recently he wrote a letter from "Somewhere in France" in which he expressed his disapproval of many things his fellow baseball magnates have been doing recently. He impugned their spirit and said considering that the country was at war there was altogether too much talk of money and too many big trades.

BEST BACKSTOP RECORDS

A catcher who works in at least 100 games each season is worth a liberal salary. Last year's major league records show that these men passed the century mark behind the bat: National league: Killifer and Wingo, each 120 games, and Rariden, 100; American league: Schalk and Severeid, each 139 games; O'Neill, 127, and Ainsmith, 119.

Those who caught between 90 and 100 games were Stanage of Detroit, Nunamaker of the Yankees, Miller of Brooklyn, Snyder of the Cardinals and Tragresser of the Braves.

PING BODIE TALKS LIKE PLAYER FULL OF PEPPER

"I am thirty years young and have about four or five years of major league baseball in me yet. If it hadn't been for a disagreement with Jimmy Callahan in 1914, I never would have been out of the big league. I weigh 15 pounds less today than when I reported to Connie Mack at Jacksonville last spring, and I know positively that I am in for a good season."

Ping Bodie was speaking. He had engaged in two strenuous work-outs at the Macon ball yard with all the enthusiasm of a schoolboy who has ambitions to make his school team, and Bodie did not hesitate to say that he was ready at that moment to play more baseball.

"I have always liked to play the game," continued Ping, "and for that reason it never has become difficult for me to give my best efforts all the time. Just look at last season. I came very close to getting in the .300 class, and I bet that I get there this year. I did my best last year, but somehow or other I imagine that I will get better breaks with a club that has a first-division stamp on it. If I miss that .300 class, it will not be through lack of effort."

Means the Same Thing.

"What's become of the old-fashioned sporting editor who called a left-handed pitcher a southpaw?"

"Oh, he's still up and about, but I notice that he has an assistant who calls a left-handed pitcher a portside hurler."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

STALLINGS IS "MIRACLE MAN"

Manager of Braves Christened as Such After Victory of 1914 for Championship.

George T. Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, was christened the miracle man of baseball after his world's championship victory of 1914, with the Boston Braves. Stallings is forty-nine years old. The miracle man won his first pennant with the Nashville club in 1895. The following season found him managing the Detroit Americans. He managed the Philadelphia Nationals in 1897-98; Detroit Americans in 1899, 1900, 1901; Buffalo 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906; out of baseball in 1907; Newark, 1908; New York Americans, 1909; Buffalo, 1910, 1911, 1912; Boston Nationals, 1913-1918. He ran fifth with the Braves in 1913, won the pennant and world's championship in 1914. Stallings' team ran second in 1915, third in 1916 and sixth in 1917.

George Stallings.

DIAMOND NOTES

Baseball fans are showing great interest in the world's series on the western front.

• • •

The Kansas City club has turned Infielder Joe Wagner over to the Louisville club.

• • •

Captain Huston thinks the magnates have failed to do their bit. Haven't they arranged to collect the war tax?

• • •

Connie Mack's refusal to pay Jake Munch the salary he demands may leave that young man to his coal business this season.

• • •

Bill Sherdell, the left-hander from whom the St. Louis Cardinals are expecting much, declares that Paddy Livingston made him a real pitcher.

• • •

Claire Goodwin and Jack Killilay, former Coast league players, have joined the army medical service and are on duty at the Presidio, San Francisco.

• • •

Pitchers Milligan and Evans, who made the trip to the Pirates' training camp with the first squad, did not linger long, both being called to Uncle Sam's colors.

• • •

Manager Fielder Jones of the St. Louis Browns is crying for a left-handed pitcher, but where will he get one? There seems to be a sudden shortage of southpaws in both major leagues and particularly in the American.

• • •

Arthur Shafer, who used to play third base for the Giants, has again taken up the game. Shafer enlisted in the navy some time ago, and he is now captain of the baseball team at the naval training station at San Diego, Cal.

• • •

Mike Hogan is the name of a pitching recruit who is with the Giants. Manager McGraw thinks he has great possibilities.

AT LEAST 1,000,000 OVERSEAS BY JULY 1

Secretary Baker's Forecast for America's Military Contribution Far Exceeded—General Goethals Has Been Greatest Single Factor.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, May 9.—America's contribution to the allied army reserve which will stop the Hun advance in Belgium, France and Italy, will be at least one million men by July 1. It will not alone be men, however, but guns of a new type, designed to cope with the latest terrors of Krupp and the Skoda plants are to be brought into action. The limitations of the United States have been human limitations up to now. These are being overcome with a rapidity that is close to marvelous.

It was learned today that Secretary of War Baker was characteristically conservative in his announcement last night that his forecast of "half a million" promised the senate military affairs committee n January "to be over there" early this year has been made good. Figures cannot be dealt with except in round numbers, but it can be said today, on authority that cannot be questioned, that by the time 1918 is half over—July first to be exact—the American land forces across the Atlantic will exceed one million men.

The troop movements of the last three months and which will continue indefinitely provide a chapter of military efficiency which will thrill all Americans when the details can be published. The great fleet of fast transports created by the army and navy and added to by France, Great Britain and Japan, has met the great problem of the war, how to utilize the man power of the United States. Germany knows this. This is the secret of the stupendous German efforts on the western front. They fear the American man power which will turn the scales through sheer weight of numbers and they have tried, and continue to try, to force the decision before the million Americans reach the front. This now will be impossible, army experts say.

The greatest single factor in the troop movements has been Major General George W. Goethals. His reorganization of the quartermaster's department went to every branch. In consequence the movements of men and supplies goes forward in the easiest possible manner. Not alone do men travel overseas on the fast transports but every supply vessel leaving an Atlantic port carries its quota of soldiers destined for a British or a French port.

WASHINGTON GLAD OF OUR FARM WORK

News of the work to be undertaken in Ulster county in connection with the Farm Volutneer Movement has given satisfaction to officials of the Department of Agriculture in Washington, as appears from the following letter:

May 6, 1918.

Mr. E. M. Heermans, Secretary, Chamber of Commerce, Kingston, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—Your letter of May 2nd addressed to Col. Ousley has been referred to me for attention. We are glad indeed to hear of your interest in the farm labor problem and that the Ulster County Farm Bureau will help the farmers by getting business men to sign pledges to give one day to farm labor. This movement is going on very actively throughout the country and promises to yield a large amount of satisfactory labor for harvest work.

Very truly yours,
E. V. WILCOX, Agriculturist.

Rugar-Wager.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock when Miss Ruth Wager of Walden became the bride of Louis Rugar of New Paltz. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. Sutcliff at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. George Beal, of Montgomery street, Poughkeepsie, who also acted as matron of honor, while Lewis Wager, brother of the bride, acted as best man. The bride wore a traveling suit of blue with picture hat to match and carried bride's roses, while the matron of honor wore maroon satin and carried sweetheart roses. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Rugar left for Walden where a reception and dinner were given them by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Wager. The young couple have a host of friends both in Walden and New Paltz who wish them the best of success throughout their married life. The groom has been called for military service, and expects to leave for camp on Friday, somewhere in the U. S. A.

The "fiddleback" and "mottled" grains are most sought, the grain of the former being not unlike that of the North American curly maple. The color, however, is different, being a rich golden brown. The panel effects are obtained by combining the figure with the plain blackwood.

And on His Appeal For Funds, Jewish Residents of Kingston Went "Over the Top."

Kingston made a prompt response, as usual, when an appeal recently was received for funds to aid the war stricken sufferers in Poland and Lithuania, who are living amid conditions, according to Secretary of State Robert Lansing, which are "indescribable."

Secretary Lansing's telegram to Felix M. Warburg of the Joint Distribution Committee, New York city, was as follows:

"For God's sake raise all money you can—conditions indescribable in Poland and Lithuania—one million people perishing from cold—death-rate ten per cent—soup kitchens and asylums for aged and children closed for lack of funds; children cannot attend school account extreme weakness and lack of clothing. An unexampled catastrophe faces the Polish Jews—America practically sole help. Authorized Minister Garrett to draw further regular monthly appropriations as required by Dutch committee, Jacobus Kann, treasurer. Individual remittances through Lissa Kann very satisfactory. Sixty per cent already acknowledged. Signed Senior and Bogen.

"ROBERT LANSING,
"Secretary of State."

Immediately on receipt of the message on Passover, April 4, an appeal was made by the Congregation Agudas Achim, Rabbi F. Miller and Joseph Miller, a student at the Jewish College of Theology, New York city.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

What's one man's poison, signor, is another's meat or drink.—Beaumont and Fletcher.

A small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.—Shakespeare.

TEMPTING DISHES.

The parsnip is a most tasty dish and may be varied in several ways.

If the sweet flavor is objectionable to any, the water may be removed during the boiling adding fresh water, then drain, mash and season well with butter, salt and pepper. The seasoned parsnip may be dropped into fritter batter and fried, making a most delicious fritter.

Carrot Loaf.—Take one cupful each of finely ground carrots, milk, boiled rice, ground peanuts, or six ounces of chopped round steak, one egg, one cupful of bread crumbs, a fourth of a cupful of rice water, two tablespoonfuls of minced pepper, three tablespoonfuls of minced suet or pork, a tablespoonfuls of onion juice and one-half teaspoonful each of salt and mustard. Boil the carrots in rice water for five minutes; cool. Add rice, peanuts, bread, milk, beaten egg and other ingredients; mix well, shape into a loaf and bake 45 minutes.

Tomato Sauce.—Take one pint of tomatoes, four tablespoonfuls of fat, a half an onion finely chopped, two tablespoonfuls of corn starch, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Cook the onion and tomato ten minutes. Strain. Melt the fat, add the flour and mix; add salt, pepper and tomato. Cook until it thickens.

Creole Sauce.—Take one-fourth cupful each of flour and mushrooms, two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, a fourth of a cupful of condensed tomato, seven ripe olives, a fourth of a cupful of butter and one and a half cupfuls of water. Cook the onion and butter in a double boiler 15 minutes; add water and strained tomatoes. Then add flour to butter and onion and stir all together. Let boil five minutes, then add the seasonings with salt and pepper. Serve cold.

Fish Croquettes.—Take one and three-fourths cupfuls of fish, one cupful of cream sauce and one egg. Add the sauce to the fish, then add seasonings; dip in crumbs, eggs and crumbs again; fry in deep fat and serve.

Now that you know what my business is, let me say to you, whether you are a Judge, Lawyer, Corporation Head, Banker, Business Man or Mr. Plain Citizen, you admire fine Stationery, engraved, printed or lithographed.

That's true.

And you know that you have not always obtained it, often due to the fact that the person taking your order did not know how to turn out the work. Yet you took what he sent because you did not want to bother again.

That's also true, too.

The beginning of the end of experiences of that kind (and you've all had them) is in sight if you will get in touch with one who understands what you should have when you buy Engraved, Printed or Lithographed Stationery.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, May 8.—At the last meeting of the Daughters of America they decided to take a fifty dollar Liberty Bond and so one can readily see that as a patriotic order they are willing to do whatever they can for the boys. It is not always the greatest noise and applause and many other trifles that win glory but often in silence and no display whatever obtains the desired effect.

Edgar Elmendorf of Beacon has spent a short time in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Decker had as week end guests their daughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bradshaw, of Ossining.

This Friday evening the Epworth League will hold a social and have League will hold a social and have [illegible] at the conclusion of business.

Next in line of moving things for this place comes the Chautauqua movement, which reaches many places. I presume this year as last we will have bands of music and Glee Clubs and so called dramatic clubs, lectures, and in fact they will serve you with whatever you want, providing your wants are not numerous, so we presume they will sell tickets soon. Keep your purse filled, so you can open it very often for the several calls for money.

Mrs. Edward Miller attended the funeral of an aunt in Kingston Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Abram Bloomer returned home Monday after spending several days most delightfully in the busy metropolis.

The Red Cross of the M. E. Church met as usual Monday evening in the church parlor. The ladies look very attractive in their new headgear and they do a lot of work under the direction of Mrs. Howard E. Wilcox.

Reuben H. Decker was in Washington Hollow Tuesday

The M. E. Church official board held its regular meeting on Monday evening in the church parlor

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dwyer of New York city spent the week end at their summer home here. They have had it treated to a fine coat of white paint and this so changes the appearance that one scarcely would know the house. It is a great improvement. After the school closes in New York they, with their children, will occupy this residence until fall.

A food conservation meeting was held on Tuesday afternoon at the high school. There was a very small attendance. They had bread, biscuit and muffins for the people to taste, and some were very good.

Alphonso Koons is up to date. He is going to have a fine concrete wall around his place and awnings put to his porch. He believes in taking some pleasure. We agree with him. You go this way only once; take pleasure while you can, and comfort goes hand in hand with pleasure, and yet with it all everyone does his or her bit for the boys who are in service.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Snedes have had guests from out of town.

Portia Godney returned Tuesday from a visit with the Bradshaws in Connecticut. She had a very pleasant time while there.

Mrs. John Graham was in Poughkeepsie on Tuesday

The ladies of First M. E. Church of this place gave a reception in honor of Rev. F. A. Coon and family last Friday evening, May 3rd. The guests were received and entertained in the lecture room of the church. The attendance was large and in fact we think the largest on like occasions for a long time. This we heard was under the management and supervision of Mrs R. H. Decker, president of the Auxiliary Club of said church and here her reputation as hostess was confirmed and her skill demonstrated by the manner in which she, with the other ladies of the society, made the occasion a complete success. During the evening a program was given [illegible] the opening, gave words of welcome that were hearty, encouraging and sympathetic, with some humor in also and the pastor was assured of the hearty co-operation of the workers in the church by Mr Lent's remarks. The pastor acknowledged a welcome most beautifully. That and his wife will establish a deep friendship between pastor and people. No matter of what denomination they are cast winning by their genial ways, a place in the affections of the people of this place. Rev. G. H. Scofield, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, was called upon and gave a few remarks and cordial greeting to the pastor and wife and hoped that all might work together. The church should safeguard, simplify and brighten social life; he brought in a few illustrations upon some subjects which were enjoyed by all. Mrs. E. A. Marsh gave one of her fine recitations and responded most graciously to an encore which every one present greatly appreciated. There were vocal selections by Mrs B. M. Whitley and Mrs. Kelsey Staples. Also chorus singing, which was very gratifying and fine instrumental selections by the Misses Grace and Pearl Scott and Miss Dorothy Churchill that gave untold pleasure. And J. W. Fester E. A. Marsh, F. L. Metcalf and H. E. Wilcox were the quartet of talent who gave very interesting remarks upon church work, Red Cross, finances, war, Sunday school, Liberty Bonds and telling of the work of women who are devoting themselves in doing for brave boys, fighting freedom's battles. Go where you may, the knitting needle is woman's weapon but let us stand by our churches and for our country, trusting in the Almighty power for peace. The remarks of these men were greatly appreciated and highly commented on. After digesting all this eloquence from beginning to close of program they were ready for digesting the sandwiches, cake and coffee prepared by the ladies for the inner man and later all left for their respective homes declaring the reception a social success

Last Friday was Auxiliary Club day and it was an ideal one and the handsome residence of Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Decker on Vineyard avenue was thrown open to the club members and a very large delegation availed themselves of the opportunity of attending. The hostess of the afternoon, Mrs Uriah Decker, and her two daughters, Mrs. Lloyd Plass and Miss Elizabeth Decker spared no pains to make the meeting an enjoyable one for by their cordial greetings every member felt as if they were in their own home. The Rev. F. A. Coon the new pastor conducted the devotional exercises which were very much appreciated by every one present. At the close of those exercises the gavel, in the hands of the president, gave evidence that business would be taken up. Cordial greetings were extended to all by her and especially to the Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Coon, who were present for the first time. Since the last meeting this club has been very busy—they have put new carpets in some rooms in the parsonage; had a great deal of papering done and painting interior; new furniture and many little affairs attended to, which certainly add to the pleasure and comfort of the pastor and family. The reports of the various committees were encouraging and all seemed interested in doing their "bit," for the church, for all realize what it means and every member fully realized that intelligent, well directed and continuous effort along any line of work will eventually bring reward. New committees were appointed for the month of May and many subjects thought over and suggestions given. Motions made and seconded in regard to future affairs. It seems this time is incomparably the most critical and urgent the church have ever known, yet this band of women never lag or play the part of slackers. The social features add greatly to the pleasure of the members at each meeting. Refreshments [illegible] an opportunity while eating to visit with the people. At this meeting a substantial luncheon was served, consisting of potato salad, cucumber pickles, jelly, olives, several varieties of cake and coffee, and by the time all these good things were eaten all declared they did not want the fourth meal until quite late. All gave expressions of pleasure to the hostess and hoping for many more such meetings as this one held at the Decker home on Vineyard avenue.

"THERE'S A REASON"

CLINTONDALE

Clintondale, May 9.—Grange Hall presented a capacity house to greet the graded school on Friday evening when the anniversary entertainment was given, and those present spoke in highest praise of the creditable manner in which the program was rendered. The stage was effectively decorated with our country's flag, which was a proper setting for the patriotic character of the program. Music was furnished by Floyd McKinstry of Gardiner and Mrs. J. H. Heaton. Every number merited commendation from the first dialogue, "Raise a Pig" until the closing tableau, and the audience showed its appreciation by frequent and prolonged applause. The dialogues, "The Spelling Class" and "The Train to Maaro" were of a humorous character and were well done, also a dialogue called "The Boston Tea Party" was exceptionally well performed. Two small Italian girls sang a song in their native language which was heartily applauded. Harold Ackhart, always a favorite with an audience, sang "It's a Long Way to Berlin" and in answer to an encore sang "Daddy, I Want to Go." Clifton Ackhart and Harold Sutton carried the house into a wild state of enthusiasm by their singing and they were repeatedly encored and reluctantly allowed to leave the stage. The tableaux were exceedingly beautiful and the two drills, the U. S. A. Drill by sixteen boys and the Patriotic Drill by twelve girls were both beautiful in effect and perfect in execution, showing much training and skill in their development. Much credit is due Principal George H. Shiels and the primary teacher, Miss Isadora Livingston, for the deep interest they have taken in the training of the pupils and the splendid results which their effort brought forth. These teachers deserve not only commendation for their good entertainment but also for the conscientious work they are doing each day in the school room in their endeavor to develop the intellect and character of the pupils entrusted to their care. The gross receipts were $68.85, the net proceeds of which is for the School Junior Red Cross.

TEMPERANCE WOMEN IN ANNUAL SESSION

Institute Held in Kingston Wednesday Was Largely Attended and Very Interesting.

The annual institute of the Ulster County W. C. T. U. was held in St. James's M. E. Church on Wednesday.

Greetings from the city union were extended by Miss S. Alice Kiersted, while the Rev. T. H. Baragwanath, pastor of St. James's M. E. Church, extended the greetings of the church. Mrs. Mottie Conine of New Hurley responded.

Mrs. J. D. Rose of Highland conducted a W. C. T. U. Exchange in which matters affecting the county union were taken up and discussed.

The discussion as to what the union is doing to promote household thrift proved an interesting feature, and three minute talks answering that question were given by Mrs. Alice Crispell, Y. P. B. secretary; Mrs. Minnie Palmer, L. T. L. secretary; Mrs. J. Albert Palen, recording secretary, Ulster county; Mrs. E. A. Smiley, president of the Ellenville Union; Mrs. Sarah C. Pratt, president of Highland Union; Mrs. Mottie Conine, president of New Hurley Union; Mrs. Edward Young, president of Milton Union; and Miss Katherine W. Deyo, president of Wallkill Union.

Mrs. M. H. Bell gave a brief resume of the national convention and mid-year executive session at Albany, and the morning session closed with a prayer offered by Mrs. John Neander of Gardiner.

Misplaced Blessings.

The afternoon session of the institute opened with a prayer service led by Mrs. Edward Scofield of Highland. After the Scripture reading, Mrs. Scofield spoke of the merciful war relief work in which the W. C. T. U. was helping and made a request as the outgrowth of the following story, vouched for as authentic. A woman recently come to this country from France told of this incident related to her by a soldier from the front. On receipt of a pair of knitted socks from the states he promptly put them on and started in on a long march. Soon one foot began to hurt him and finally became so painful that he had to fall out of line and take off his shoes and socks. In the toe of the paining foot, he found a piece of paper rolled up, on opening proved to be a note from the knitter which said, "God bless your poor tired feet." It is needless to add that every knitter was asked to refrain from putting notes in the socks, but not from sending a personal word which is always appreciated.

Prayer was then offered by Mrs. Palmer of Cottekill. One of the most inspiring features of the afternoon was the recital of a flag poem, given by Master Conine, son of a former W. C. T. U. president. Master Conine had a voice that reached every corner of the room, a vivid imagination and a way of expressing the imagery in his own mind that drove home with irresistible force his every word. One would say that the lad was really dramatic if it had not all been far too much in earnest to have even the semblance of drama so enthusiastic was the applause that the lad had to come back, and his recital of "Kaiser Bill's Dream," brought down the house, the applause being both loud and long. If half of our men fight with the same spirit that Master Conine recited, autocracy may well tremble on its throne.

Mrs. Abbott, formerly of Kingston and always an eager and efficient W. C. T. U. worker was then called to the platform and expressed the sincere joy it was to her to be with her former Kingston friends and coworkers again. She told of the loyalty of her own family to the cause of prohibition, her two sons and daughter as well as herself having been privileged to vote at the April election. She emphasized the value of the pledge work and called attention to the great progress made in the movement, and of the present fact that so many other organizations are now engaged in temperance work that the W. C. T. U. is not called upon for the aggressive activities of former days.

National Prohibition Resolution.

Apropos of the splendid recital given with so much spirit by the young son of Mrs Conine, and in the interest of the soldiers and sailors of our country, the following resolution was then offered from the floor, presented by Mrs. Edward Young and adopted:

Resolved that the W. C. T. U. of Ulster County now in session at Kingston N. Y. respectfully petition the honored bodies of the House of Representatives and Senate of the United States, to act at once in favor of National Prohibition as a war measure."

It was suggested that information to the effect that all present were of voting age in an enfranchised state be added.

Citizenship Forum.

The next subject on the program was announced as a "Forum on Citizenship," conducted by Mrs. L. M. De Silva, corresponding secretary of the State W. C. T. U., which proved to be full of interest. Mrs. De Silva herself is a woman of unusual charm, a delightful and convincing speaker to listen to and she knew her subject thoroughly.

Before opening the forum she offered to the audience a little primer of voting, and also a number of sheets of "The Busy Woman's Questionnaire." Both were almost immediately taken up by those present, there not being enough to go around. While deeply deploring this war itself wherein men become beasts, Mrs. De Silva still was assured that "God's in His Heaven, All's Well With His World." One good which she saw as coming out of this world conflict was the world-wide interest in prohibition. Whatever might be otherwise said of ex-Czar Nicholas, this would always redound to his lasting credit, that he liberated the 160,000,000 Russians from the slavery of alcohol. And all over the world reached by this war, the use of alcohol is being greatly curtailed, for it has been recognized that the efficient army is a sober army.

This war has further discovered the women of the country to the world as never before, according to Mrs. De Silva. Practically everything is today being asked of the women of the land except that they bear arms, and the women are promptly and efficiently granting all that is asked of them. Now, the women of the land ask only one thing of the government and that is their enfranchisement. Mrs. De Silva then went on to relate that incident in the life of Francis Willard, which as a little girl in her Illinois home, gave her her first vision of the power that the women of the land might be if given the right to vote. When she first spoke in favor, in fact urging woman's suffrage, Miss Willard was either scorned or labored with by her W. C. T. U. co-workers and friends. Mrs. De Silva then quoted a portion of the closing sentences of Miss Willard's famous "Home Protection Address," now so famous. And at last Miss Willard was recognized nationally for today in Statuary Hall, Washington, D. C., hers is the only bust of a woman in the hall.

Mrs. De Silva then told a highly amusing but pertinent story of a debate held where it was resolved, "That to a man on a back-woods farm a cow is of more value than a woman." In summing up the decision of the critics as to the debate, the judge said that his sympathies were with the woman but the money was on the cow. Whereupon a little woman in the rear of the hall rose and said with much spirit that she was supporting her husband and a family of children and the cow. She was told that her testimony could not be counted as she was not "one of the selected debaters." The speaker rejoiced that in 19 states, the women are now counted among the "selected debaters."

The grave responsibility that accompanies the privilege of voting was put before the women, and the speaker expressed her firm conviction that those cities that went wet at the last election did so because both the men and women who should have counted it a duty to do so failed to vote while all influenced by liquor traffic in any way did vote. She considered that in the matter of prohibition it was no longer a question of sex of the voter but of the Christian principles which they hold.

What Agnes Riddle Did.

Illustrating this point she told of Agnes Riddle, owner and personally operator of a big ranch in Colorado, mother of four sons, and member of the Colorado Legislature. It had been decided by the politicians to vote into being segregated vice district. Those in favor of the action did the usual lobbying but overlooked Agnes Riddle on the ground that she would not attend a session of the Legislature where such a question would be debated. They were mistaken. Agnes Riddle was there, and after listening to the arguments in favor of the movement, she rose and said that she would vote for the motion only in case they would also prepare a segregated district for fallen men as she could see no reason why the vicious men should go free and their poor victims be thus treated. So convincing was her arguments, not because she was a woman but because Christian principles backed her vote, that the only member of the legislature voting in favor of the bill was the man who introduced the same.

Again, Mrs. De Silva called attention to the incident with regard to the "Legion of Death" in the Russian Army. Fear had been expressed for the safety of the women of the Legion, as they were encamped next to a body of men, many of whom were indeed vicious. Sure enough, one night there came a call from one of the men, demanding admittance. The sentry asked him what he wanted. He boldly said he wanted to come in where the girls were. The answer was hurled back, "There are no girls here, only soldiers." Mrs. De Silva also showed that the theory that voting would make women different had been exploded except that it gave a power to the woman of character not before possessed.

Woman's Questionnaire.

Mrs. De Silva then took up the "Busy Woman's Questionnaire" which contained 20 pertinent questions relative to the vote in the hands of women, and questions from the floor added to the interest of this part of the forum. During this forum there were two or three highly amusing tilts between the women and the Rev. Mr. Chase, and other men in the audience, showing that even the men in favor of suffrage are not yet accustomed to the same as an established fact.

Mrs. DeSilva's able address was followed by a violin solo, "Traumerei," played by Miss Jane Hogeboom, with Miss Myers at the piano. The number was generously applauded.

Another very interesting feature of the program was "Snap Shots from the State Convention," held at Jamestown, given in a concise, entertaining and vivid manner by Mrs. J. D. Rose, who heartily thanked the Union for giving her the privilege of attending such an inspiring convention. The report of the resolutions committee was next read by Miss Reynolds, wherein the Union went on record as backing government at every possible point but seriously objected to the fearful waste at this time of sugar, grain and coal in the continued manufacture of beer in this country. A resolution of thanks to the local Union, Miss S. Alice Kiersted, president, and to the officers and members of St. James M. E. Church was included in this report.

Institute Attendance.

It was announced that the present Institute was one of the largest ever held here in that there were 62 delegates present: 31 visitors, 6 officers, 9 superintendents, neither presidents nor delegates.

Just before the meeting was brought to a close, a brief newspaper article was read, which would offer to the W. C. T. U. or any other prohibition forces in the land the biggest lever with which to pry into place their objective that has as yet been forged. It was this statement. "We fight a dry Germany. Not a drop of beer is being manufactured in Germany today."

It seemed a prophetic and striking announcement with which to close the institute.

FREE DISPENSARY SOON TO OPEN HERE

Tuberculosis Dispensary Now Assured—Will Be Centrally Located—Some Furnishings Are Needed.

The Committee on a special Tuberculosis Dispensary in this city, appointed with power by the executive council of the Ulster County Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis, has reported to the Freeman that the dispensary is now an assured fact, and that it will be open to patients in the very near future. The exact date will be announced as soon as decided upon.

The dispensary will be opened at 578 Broadway, in the building recently occupied by Netburn the tailor, and almost directly opposite the Red Cross headquarters. There will be four rooms; an office, an undressing room; an examining room and a dressing room. Dr. Bongartz will be in charge of the hours that the Dispensary will be open each week, and will be assisted as necessary by Drs. O'Meara and Gates, the members of the committee having the matter in charge, with the visiting tuberculosis nurse assisting.

In addition to those cases which the visiting nurse will recommend to visit the dispensary, persons who suspect that they may have tuberculosis in any form are urged to go to the dispensary, which will be free, and where, since only tubercular cases are to be considered, expert information as to their condition will be given them. Wherever it is found that there is sufficient ground for suspicion to require the care or treatment of the patient by a physician, the patient will be referred to his or her own physician. If the patient has no physician, follow up care of the best sort will be arranged for at the dispensary.

Realizing the deep interest which the people of this community always take in any movement to fight consumption or tuberculosis in any form, the committee is venturing to ask for a little assistance in this work, which will save the expenditure of actual money. There will be needed for the dispensary, a good desk that can be locked; substantial chairs or benches; a reliable scales—just ordinary scales whereon a person can be accurately weighed being all that is needed. Any person having any of the above mentioned articles which they could contribute or desiring to give money to go toward the purchase of such supplies is asked to communicate at once with Dr. Mark O'Meara, chairman of the committee, telephone 1174.

Throughout the entire state there has been this spring, under the State Charities Aid, a strong movement to establish such dispensaries, especially in view of the war-time increase in tuberculosis from various causes. This dispensary should be the spot to which any men in the city rejected in the draft because of tuberculosis or the suspicion of the same should go at once, in order that prompt action may prove a life saver.

The establishment of this dispensary will bring Kingston into the list of cities in the state which now have such means of fighting the great white plague. On April 15th there were 33 cities not yet so supplied, and Kingston's enrollment will reduce that number by one at least.

Persons who are perfectly well themselves, but have suspicions about some neighbor, acquaintance or friend, should do their utmost to persuade them to go to the dispensary to make sure about the matter. By doing this they may be saving human life.

DESTROY MORE AEROPLANES.

British Reort 17 More Shot Down on Italian Front.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, May 9.—Seventeen additional Austro-German aeroplanes have been shot down on the Italian front, the British war office reported today in a statement dealing with operations in that theater of war. The text of the announcement follows:

"Two successful raids were carried out and we captured a few prisoners. The artillery is more active. Hostile batteries were engaged with satisfactory results. Our air forces, since the last report, have destroyed seventeen enemy aeroplanes. None of ours was lost."

WALLKILL.

Wallkill, May 9.—The Third Liberty Loan drive ended on Saturday in Wallkill with great satisfaction to the proud patriotic citizens of the town of Shawangunk. $50,000 was subscribed; $20,000 was the allotment. The committee worked hard and as an appreciation of the loyalty of the towns people, the members of the men's and women's committee will donate to the town a U. S. flag to fly from an iron pole, which will be set in concrete in the park, a gift from Mrs. George Halliday. Below the U. S. flag will flow the Third Liberty Loan committee flag, with its proud star for doubling the subscription. When the above flags will be unfurled appropriate services will be held to which everyone, far and near, will be welcome. The Liberty parade held in Wallkill on Liberty Day was the largest ever held in this vicinity and reflected credit to the entire community, who helped make it a pronounced success. $100 was realized for the Local Red Cross as a result of Red Cross girls collecting money in streets.

The minstrel showed, under the direction of Robert Yeaple, held three consecutive nights last week for a Home Red Cross benefit, was largely attended. All honor is due to the boys who worked so hard to add $100 to the Red Cross work for their fellowmen in camps and across the seas.

Mothers' Day will be celebrated in the Reformed Church Sunday morning. Anyone wishing carnations can procure them of Miss Ada Liggett.

GOVERNOR SETS STIELOW FREE

Will Follow Same Procedure With Stielow's Brother-in-law, Both Convicted of Murder—State-Wide Interest in Case.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, May 9.—After spending nearly 3 years in Sing Sing prison and facing the electric chair several times, Charles F. Stielow will walk out of prison a free man within a day or two, freed of the charge of a double murder. Stielow was pardoned last night by Governor Whitman, following an investigation conducted by George A. Bond of Syracuse, special deputy attorney general. The governor ordered the commutation papers prepared today. They will be immediately sent to prison authorities and Stielow will be released.

The same procedure will be followed with Nelson I. Green, Stielow's brother-in-law, who was convicted of murder, second degree, in connection with the same crime.

Plans are already being made for the prosecution of Clarence F. O'Connell and Erwin King, peddlers, now charged with the crime of killing Charles B. Phelps, 70 years old, and his housekeeper, Margaret Wolcott, 50, West Shelby, N. Y., in March, 1915, the crime of which Stielow nearly paid for with his life.

The Stielow case has been one of the most perplexing in the criminal annals of the state. His conviction of murder in the first degree was affirmed by the court of appeals.

Three applications for new trials were denied and his life was only saved by frequent respites granted by the governor following a confession made by King that he had committed the murders, despite that King later repudiated his confession. In December last, however, King made another confession charging O'Connell with the crime and admitting having aided in it himself.

O'Connell and King are now in prison.

Gave Hat For Red Cross.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Macon, Mo., May 9.—"Folks, I haven't got very much—I haven't got any money, but I'll do what I can," declared Frank Long, a farmer, at a Red Cross auction sale at Rogers school house near here. "How much am I offered for this hat?" he asked, as he lifted his hat in his hand above his head.

The crowd laughed.

Then some one said "ten cents." Some one else doubled the bid, and the hat was knocked down for $2.50. The sale brought $85. Mr. Long went home bareheaded and happy.

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT.

Frolic in Cooking Class in Ponckhockie Exceptionally Good.

Wednesday evening some of the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Ponckhockie Union Church showed that they had hitherto unsuspected talent by staging what was called a musical burletta, "A Frolic in the Cooking Class," in the chapel. The entertainment drew a large attendance and it was necessary to place more seats to accommodate the spectators who came fully prepared to enjoy the program. The entire cast of characters was exceptionally good and in song and story the ladies gave an exhibition of cooking that kept the audience in a hearty roar of laughter. The ladies who took part, all of whom made a decided hit, were Miss Elizabeth Staples, Mrs. Edgar Thompson, Mrs. Sherwood Wells, Mrs. John B. Osterhoudt, Mrs. Charles Lahl, Mrs. David Gill, Jr., Mrs. Walter N. Gill, Mrs. L. Thratcher, Mrs. F. W. Moot, Mrs. C. M. DuBois, Miss Ruth Gill and Miss Vida Berryan. At the close of the entertainment ice cream and cake were served.

PROCEEDINGS IN SUPREME COURT

An action for damages brought by Teresa Sisco against Earl C. Beardslee and Hattie M. Beardslee was begun in the supreme court Wednesday afternoon before Judge Howard and a jury. The plaintiff alleges that on the afternoon of July 15, 1917, she was riding on the Kingston-Saugerties state road in an automobile and as the guest of John Sisco, at the rate of ten or fifteen miles an hour, when the defendants' car which was going in the same direction at a rate of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour, attempted to pass between a wagon and the car in which plaintiff was riding, but that they were negligent and careless in doing this, which resulted in the car in which the plaintiff was riding being overturned, and plaintiff and other occupants were thrown out.

The plaintiff claims that she sustained injuries to the left arm and shoulder, bruises on left side, gash on left limb and bruises about the limbs and body, and asks for $1,000 damages.

The defendants, through their attorney, Judge Willim D. Brinnier, Jr., make a general denial of the charges of negligence and carelessness. The plaintiff is represented by Andrew J. Cook.

The case of the plaintiff rested Wednesday afternoon and the defendant's case was started this morning. Michael DeCicco of East Kingston, justice of the peace, who was also riding in the Sisco car the day of the accident, brought suit against the Beardslees. The action was tried at the March term of the supreme court before Justice Rudd and a jury. The jury returned a verdict of $5 for the plaintiff. The testimony at this triad was similar to that at the other trial, with practically the same witnesses.

Grants Motion to Dismiss Action.

In Case No. 66, an acton for damages brought by Fred W. Phillips and Norman A. Brown against Grace V. Merritt and Charles H. Merritt, Judge Howard granted the motion made by Arthur C. Connelly, attorney for the defendants, for a dismissal of the action, upon the grounds that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that there was any misrepresentation upon the part of the defendants. The motion was made at the close of the plaintiff's case Wednesday afternoon. Joseph M. Fowler also appeared for the defendants. Plaintiffs were represented by Judge John G. Van Etten and Andrew J. Cook. Plaintiffs claimed that last spring they bought from the defendants, for $3,100, a lot on Clinton avenue, nearly opposite the Senate House, for the purpose of erecting a garage. Plaintiffs alleged that the defendants represented the ground as being solid and firm, but that when they prepared to lay the foundations they found the soil contained quicksand. They sued for the purchase price and to have the lot transferred back to defendants.

Inquest This Morning.

An inquest was taken this morning in Case No. 95, William Redmond against A. E. Rose, to recover on a note. Judge Howard awarded judgment to the plaintiff for $320 and costs. Plaintiff was represented by William D. Brinnier, Sr. There was no appearance for the defense.

Prove Will of Isaac Davis.

The will of Isaac Davis, who died at Kingston January 7, 1918, was declared valid by the jury; the court ordering a verdict to that effect. It was expected that there would be a contest over the will, but the contestants changed their minds. Proponents were represented by William D. Brinnier, Sr. George H. Sherman and George Card of Poughkeepsie were the only witnesses called. They witnessed the drawing up of the will, and testified that the testator was of sound mind at the time.

Will Be Composed of Women Skilled in Motor Vehicle Operation Who Volunteer for Military Duty.

A unit of the Ambulance Corp. of the Home Defense Reserve of New York state will shortly be organized in Kingston under the direction of the Women's Home Defense Committee. This unit must consist of women who are skilled operators of motor vehicles and who volunteer their services and motor vehicles for military duty.

When the unit is fully organized each member of it must subscribe to the following oath of enrollment:

"I hereby acknowledge to have enrolled voluntarily this ...... day of ........ 19..... as a member of the Ambulance Corps of the Home Defense Reserve for the period of the present emergency, unless sooner discharged by proper authority. I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the state of New York, and that I will serve it honestly and faithfully against all its enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the governor of the state of New York and of the officers appointed over me."

Wherever a unit is organized the commanding officer of the New York Guard located in the city, town or village, where such a unit is formed, has control and jurisdiction over it, and the commanding officer of such unit must report to him and be under his order for military duty.

Officers and non-commissioned officers are authorized for ambulance units as follows:

Of 8 and less than 18 members—1 sergeant, and a corporal for each 7 privates.

Of 18 and less than 44 members—1 second lieutenant, 2 sergeants and a corporal, for each 7 privates.

Of over 70 members—1 captain, 1 first lieutenant, 1 second lieutenant, 1 sergeant for each 20 privates, and 1 corporal for each 7 privates.

No officers above the rank of captain are authorized.

When the unit is organized and officered, Governor Whitman will issue commissions to properly qualified officers, and warrants will be issued to non-commissioned officers by the commanding officer of the unit of which they are members. Such warranted officers will receive their appointments, not only for their knowledge of their duties, but also for their ability to control and maintain discipline over the ones in their charge.

The uniform will be of olive drab or khaki material and of such pattern as may be approved by the adjutant general's office.

As there are no public moneys available for that purpose Ambulance Units will be equipped and maintained by the members thereof under such regulations as may be adopted by each unit.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 9.—Low priced railway stocks were in demand from several sources at the opening of the stock market today. New Haven responded to concentrated buying with an advance of 2¼ points to 34½. Missouri Pacific rose ⅜ to 23. Erie First Preferred ⅝ to 21, and Southern Railway 1¼ to 23½. Steel Industrials were heavy with Steel Common opening down ⅜ at 102¼, but a substantial demand appeared causing a quick rally to 102⅞. Baldwin Locomotive dropped ¾ to 81½. The Bethlehem Steel B lost ¼ to 83½.

Marine Preferred was strong at the opening, advancing ⅞ to 92⅛ with a reaction to 91¼ but later an upturn carried the price back to 91⅞. American Sugar made a gain of 2 points to 109 and American Beet Sugar rose one point to 71½. At the end of the first half hour, the market tone showed pronounced strength with advances in order all through the list.

Liberty 4's sold at 95.84, while the 3½'s were traded in at 98.90.

The active trading in the railroad issues during the first half hour was followed by declines in nearly all the active industrials on a large scale. Steel Common dropped one point to 102. The railroad issues lost some of their early gains, New Haven reacting over one point to 33⅜, while Reading dropped from 87 to 85⅞.

The upward movement in Steel Common which started early in the afternoon, carried the price of that stock to 106⅞, a gain of 4⅞ from the low of the day and a new high record for the year. The other steel industrials moved in sympathy with gains of from 1 to 3 points. Baldwin advanced from 81½ to 84, and Bethlehem Steel B was up to 86. Reading moved up to 87½ and Union Pacific to 123.

The stock market closed strong today; government bounds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

Increase Affects Those Receiving $2,000 or Less.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, May 9.—State employes receiving not more than $2,000 annually will be given increases for the duration of the war. Governor Whitman to signed the Fearon bill providing for increases of 20 per cent for employes receiving $1,000 a year or less and 15 per cent for those getting over $1,000 but not over $2,000 a year.

There are between 18,000 and 20,000 persons affected. They represent every county in the state. The amount obligated by the approval of the bill is estimated at about $2,200,000. The measure was introduced to meet the soaring prices of necessaries.

GOOD ROADS

IMPORTANCE OF WAGON ROAD

One Drawback to Fall of Rain Is That Roads Are Made Impassable for Several Days.

But for one fact, all of us could rejoice in this rain, meaning as much as it does to the growing crops. The one drawback is the unfortunate fact that the rain will make the roads almost impassable for several days. But the rain is not to blame for this state of affairs. We are. We ought to have roads on which the only effect of rain would be to wash them clean—just as it does with the city pavements. And it's not for the joy-riders alone that we need such roads, says Wichita Eagle. If we had good roads, farmers, who can't work in their fields after a rain, could do their hauling on such days. Now the rain that prevents working the fields prevents hauling to market, except light loads, and at a prohibitive cost. The wagon haul of agricultural products is infinitesimal in distance, as compared with the rail and water haul, yet it costs actually more, according to government statistics. For the benefit of the farmer we need good roads.

MAINTAIN ROADS WITH DRAG

No Better or Cheaper Way of Keeping Highways in Good Order Than by Using Implement.

Road dragging is so simple an undertaking, providing the road to be dragged is first graded, drained and shaped properly, that a summary of its benefits cannot be presented too often, writes George B. Harrison in Farmers Mail and Breeze. Anyone can make a drag and even a boy can keep a piece of road in good shape with the proper instruction at the beginning. A 10-inch or 12-inch log between 8 and 9 feet long or two 3 by 12 planks with 2 by 6 reinforcing strips of the same length, four cross sticks, a chain, boards for the platform and a metal wearing strip are certainly procurable anywhere.

The theory in road dragging which has proved practicable for road improvement is to smooth and shape up the puddled earth of a road to fill the ruts and holes and force the water off the roadway. "Puddled" earth on a road is the wet earth which has been worked up by traffic so that it is dense and when compacted will not let the water seep away. If this compacting is done without any direction ruts and holes appear and hold the water and make a bad road. But if the puddled earth be spread smoothly over the surface of the road with somewhat of a rounded effect it dries firm and hard, and the water, instead of standing in the road and making the holes deeper, must run off to the side—and the traveler has a good road.

The road dragger, or "dragman," as he usually is called, is like a clay worker when he shapes up the puddled earth and smooths the road. He puts the surface in condition and gets the standing water off, and the roadbed dries in that condition instead of holding the water and letting the traffic work the ruts deeper. The dragman could not shape this up with dust any more than the clay worker could fashion his image with dry dirt. But if he gets out right after a rain, while the earth is puddled, he can work his road and the traffic will help him, for the water will be forced out and off the surface. That is why it is so important to drag when the roads are not too dry to puddle or compact. Perhaps the traffic is sufficient to cut up the road after it is dragged, and this discourages the man who does the dragging. But in that case he should follow over the road and do it again if necessary and win the fight for a good road. If he waits until the road is dry because the vehicles rut up his dragged road he will simply plane off the surface and not remove the trouble. If he drags a second or perhaps a third time he will work toward a hard surface, impervious to water and with a minimum of dust, which is the evidence of a well-dragged highway. Perhaps, if the vehicles cut a road when it is first being dragged, the drivers may be persuaded to drive by the side, if that is feasible, while the road is first drying out or freezing.

Follow the Good Road.

Follow the good road and it will lead to a good town and by many a good farm.

Dragging Public Roads.

It is not difficult to prove that dragging the public roads regularly at the proper time probably is the most economical method of highway improvement.

Road Dragging Is Ahead.

Even at maximum costs road dragging is ahead of other maintenance both as to results and for economy.

Use Full Width of Road.

Get the traffic to use the full width of the roadway.

BASEBALL MAGNATE NOW SERVING IN FRANCE WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES

This is the first photograph of Capt. T. L. Huston, part owner with Col. Jacob Ruppert, of the New York American league baseball club, who is serving as a captain of engineers with the American expeditionary forces in France. Some of the engineers are now reported fighting with the British against the German drive. Whether or not Captain Huston is with them is not known.

Though busy with his duties of war he finds time occasionally to think of baseball. Recently he wrote a letter from "Somewhere in France" in which he expressed his disapproval of many things his fellow baseball magnates have been doing recently. He impugned their spirit and said considering that the country was at war there was altogether too much talk of money and too many big trades.

BEST BACKSTOP RECORDS

A catcher who works in at least 100 games each season is worth a liberal salary. Last year's major league records show that these men passed the century mark behind the bat: National league: Killifer and Wingo, each 120 games, and Rariden, 100; American league: Schalk and Severeid, each 139 games; O'Neill, 127, and Ainsmith, 119.

Those who caught between 90 and 100 games were Stanage of Detroit, Nunamaker of the Yankees, Miller of Brooklyn, Snyder of the Cardinals and Tragresser of the Braves.

PING BODIE TALKS LIKE PLAYER FULL OF PEPPER

"I am thirty years young and have about four or five years of major league baseball in me yet. If it hadn't been for a disagreement with Jimmy Callahan in 1914, I never would have been out of the big league. I weigh 15 pounds less today than when I reported to Connie Mack at Jacksonville last spring, and I know positively that I am in for a good season."

Ping Bodie was speaking. He had engaged in two strenuous work-outs at the Macon ball yard with all the enthusiasm of a schoolboy who has ambitions to make his school team, and Bodie did not hesitate to say that he was ready at that moment to play more baseball.

"I have always liked to play the game," continued Ping, "and for that reason it never has become difficult for me to give my best efforts all the time. Just look at last season. I came very close to getting in the .300 class, and I bet that I get there this year. I did my best last year, but somehow or other I imagine that I will get better breaks with a club that has a first-division stamp on it. If I miss that .300 class, it will not be through lack of effort."

Means the Same Thing.

"What's become of the old-fashioned sporting editor who called a left-handed pitcher a southpaw?"

"Oh, he's still up and about, but I notice that he has an assistant who calls a left-handed pitcher a portside hurler."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

George T. Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, was christened the miracle man of baseball after his world's championship victory of 1914, with the Boston Braves. Stallings is forty-nine years old. The miracle man won his first pennant with the Nashville club in 1895. The following season found him managing the Detroit Americans. He managed the Philadelphia Nationals in 1897-98; Detroit Americans in 1899, 1900, 1901; Buffalo 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906; out of baseball in 1907; Newark, 1908, New York Americans, 1909; Buffalo, 1910, 1911, 1912; Boston Nationals, 1913-1918. He ran fifth with the Braves in 1913, won the pennant and world's championship in 1914. Stallings' team ran second in 1915, third in 1916 and sixth in 1917.

DIAMOND NOTES

Baseball fans are showing great interest in the world's series on the western front.

* * *

The Kansas City club has turned Infielder Joe Wagner over to the Louisville club.

* * *

Captain Huston thinks the magnates have failed to do their bit. Haven't they arranged to collect the war tax?

* * *

Connie Mack's refusal to pay Jake Munch the salary he demands may leave that young man to his coal business this season.

* * *

Bill Sherdell, the left-hander from whom the St. Louis Cardinals are expecting much, declares that Paddy Livingston made him a real pitcher.

* * *

Claire Goodwin and Jack Killilay, former Coast league players, have joined the army medical service and are on duty at the Presidio, San Francisco.

* * *

Pitchers Milligan and Evans, who made the trip to the Pirates' training camp with the first squad, did not linger long, both being called to Uncle Sam's colors.

* * *

Manager Fielder Jones of the St. Louis Browns is crying for a left-handed pitcher, but where will he get one? There seems to be a sudden shortage of southpaws in both major leagues and particularly in the American.

* * *

Arthur Shafer, who used to play third base for the Giants, has again taken up the game. Shafer enlisted in the navy some time ago, and he is now captain of the baseball team at the naval training station at San Diego, Cal.

* * *

Mike Hogan is the name of a pitching recruit who is with the Giants. Manager McGraw thinks he has great possibilities.

AT LEAST 1,000,000 OVERSEAS BY JULY 1

Secretary Baker's Forecast for America's Military Contribution Far Exceeded—General Goethals Has Been Greatest Single Factor.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, May 9.—America's contribution to the allied army reserve which will stop the Hun advance in Belgium, France and Italy, will be at least one million men by July 1. It will not alone be men, however, but guns of a new type, designed to cope with the latest terrors of Krupp and the Skoda plants are to be brought into action. The limitations of the United States have been human limitations up to now. These are being overcome with a rapidity that is close to marvelous.

It was learned today that Secretary of War Baker was characteristically conservative in his announcement last night that his forecast of "half a million" promised the senate military affairs committee n January "to be over there" early this year has been made good. Figures cannot be dealt with except in round numbers, but it can be said today, on authority that cannot be questioned, that by the time 1918 is half over—July first to be exact—the American land forces across the Atlantic will exceed one million men.

The troop movements of the last three months and which will continue indefinitely provide a chapter of military efficiency which will thrill all Americans when the details can be published. The great fleet of fast transports created by the army and navy and added to by France, Great Britain and Japan, has met the great problem of the war, how to utilize the man power of the United States. Germany knows this This is the secret of the stupendous German efforts on the western front. They fear the American man power which will turn the scales through sheer weight of numbers and they have tried, and continue to try, to force the decision before the million Americans reach the front. This now will be impossible, army experts say.

The greatest single factor in the troop movements has been Major General George W. Goethals. His reorganization of the quartermaster's department went to every branch. In consequence the movements of men and supplies goes forward in the easiest possible manner. Not alone do men travel overseas on the fast transports but every supply vessel leaving an Atlantic port carries its quota of soldiers destined for a British or a French port.

"INDESCRIBABLE" SAID SECY. LANSING

And on His Appeal For Funds, Jewish Residents of Kingston Went "Over the Top."

Kingston made a prompt response, as usual, when an appeal recently was received for funds to aid the war stricken sufferers in Poland and Lithuania, who are living amid conditions, according to Secretary of State Robert Lansing, which are "indescribable."

Secretary Lansing's telegram to Felix M. Warburg, of the Joint Distribution Committee, New York city, was as follows:

"For God's sake raise all money you can. Conditions indescribable in Poland and Lithuania—one million people perishing from cold, death-rate ten per cent—soup kitchens and asylums for aged and children closed for lack of funds, children cannot attend school account extreme weakness and lack of clothing. An unexampled catastrophe faces the Polish Jews—America practically sole help. Authorized Minister Garrett to draw further regular monthly appropriations as required by Dutch committee, Jacobus Kann, treasurer. Individual remittances through Lissa, Kann very satisfactory. Sixty per cent already acknowledged. Signed Senior and Hagen.

"ROBERT LANSING,
"Secretary of State."

Immediately on receipt of the message on Passover, April 1, an appeal was made by the Congregation Agudas Achim, Rabbi F. Miller and Joseph Miller, a student at the Jewish College of Theology, New York city.

The total amount collected was $465.25.

Contributions were as follows:

THE KITCHEN CABINET

What's one man's poison, signor, is another's meat or drink.—Beaumont and Fletcher.

A small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.—Shakespeare.

TEMPTING DISHES.

The parsnip is a most tasty dish and may be varied in several ways. If the sweet flavor is objectionable to any, the water may be removed during the boiling by adding fresh water, then drain, mash and season well with butter, salt and pepper. The seasoned parsnip may be dropped into fritter batter and fried, making a most delicious fritter.

Carrot Loaf.—Take one cupful each of finely ground carrots, milk, boiled rice, ground peanuts, or six ounces of chopped round steak, one egg, one cupful of bread crumbs, a fourth of a cupful of rice water, two tablespoonfuls of minced pepper, three tablespoonfuls of minced suet or pork, a tablespoonfuls of onion juice and one-half teaspoonful each of salt and mustard. Boil the carrots in rice water for five minutes; cool. Add rice, peanuts, bread, milk, beaten egg and other ingredients; mix well, shape into a loaf and bake 45 minutes.

Tomato Sauce.—Take one pint of tomatoes, four tablespoonfuls of fat, a half an onion finely chopped, two tablespoonfuls of corn starch, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Cook the onion and tomato ten minutes. Strain. Melt the fat, add the flour and mix; add salt, pepper and tomato. Cook until it thickens.

Creole Sauce.—Take one-fourth cupful each of flour and mushrooms, two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, a fourth of a cupful of condensed tomato, seven ripe olives, a fourth of a cupful of butter and one and a half cupfuls of water. Cook the onion and butter in a double boiler 15 minutes; add water and strained tomatoes. Then add flour to butter and onion and stir all together. Let boil five minutes, then add the seasonings with salt and pepper. Serve cold.

Fish Croquettes.—Take one and three-fourths cupfuls of fish, one cupful of cream sauce and one egg. Add the sauce to the fish, then add seasonings; dip in crumbs, eggs and crumbs again; fry in deep fat and serve.
